Belle hits New York, starts losing strength

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York metropolitan area cleaned up and bailed out today from its first major hurricane in more than a decade as the storm, downgraded in strength, carried its heavy winds and heavy rains north through New England.

Flash flooding in the wake of Hurricane Belle, now a tropical storm, posed serious problems for Vermont and other parts of New England.

"There are just too many to list them. We're in real trouble," said Earl Osgood, operations director of Civil Defense for Vermont when he was asked about flooded roads and washed out bridges.

The impact of Belle, which made its first landfall on suburban Long Island early in the morning, was not so severe as had been expected in the metropolitan area. But it was bad enough to flood basements, snarl traffic and leave hundreds of thousands of people without electricity after fallen trees snapped power lines.

"God was with us," said Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso this morning.

Forecasters said the worst of the storm, which had packed winds of up to 110 miles an hour during its three-day journey up the Atlantic Coast, would be over by noon.

But the danger of flooding from heavy rains remained and flash flood watches were posted in parts of Connecticut, Massachusetts and northern New England. Five to eight inches of rain were expected in Connecticut; up to six inches was predicted for Vermont.

Osgood said almost all the towns from the Massachusetts line to Shrewsbury, Vt., about 12 miles south of Rutland, were threatened by severe flooding. The National Weather Service advised that the storm would intensify, not abate as expected, before moving northward out of the area.

At 6 a.m. the center of the storm was near Springfield, Mass.

"It's lost its punch," said Tony Gregory, a weather service forecaster in Boston. "It will weaken quite rapidly as it moves over the land, but it still has lots of rain left in it."

Only one fatality was directly attributed to the storm, the first major hurricane to hit New York since Donna killed 36 persons in 1960. A 19-year-old Long Island woman, out to see the storm, was hit by a falling tree.

During the morning, Belle moved north up the Connecticut River valley, already drenched by four days of rain associated with another weather system.

Accident roundup

13 hurt

Thirteen persons were injured, three seriously, in five area traffic accidents Monday, according to the highway patrol.

Two Williamsville youths received serious injuries in a motorcycle - car vehicle accident at 7 a.m., 12 miles north of Poplar Bluff on Highway 67.

The accident occurred when Mary Margaret Wade, 22, of Farmington lost control of a northbound car pulling a trailer while coming down a hill and the vehicle slid sideways into the oncoming lane and struck a soundbound motorcycle driven by Rickie Wayne Luke, 16,of Williamsville.

Luke and a passenger, Jackie Dean Wood, 16, of Williamsville Route One, received injuries and were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Wood was later transferred to Jewish Hospital in St. Louis.

A Ste. Genevieve man suffered serious injuries and three persons received minor injuries in a two - vehicle accident at 8:25 a.m. Monday on Interstate 55 half a mile north of Cape Girardeau.

The accident occurred when a northbound pickup truck driven by Michael Allen Lynn, 23, of Cape Girardeau slowed to make a left turn onto the median when a northbound car driven by Chester Guy Perkins, 39, of Ste. Genevieve came over a small rise and hit the pickup from behind. The truck overturned onto its left side in the median.

Perkins suffered serious injuries and a passenger in his car, Christopher Longgrear, 21, of Ste. Genevieve, received minor injuries. Two passengers in the Lynn vehicle, Ronald Niswonger, 16, of Cape Girardeau and Cletius Keifer, 21, of Cape Girardeau, received minor injuries. All four were taken to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Giradeau.

Three persons received injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 9:30 a.m. Monday at the junction of Highway 60 and 77 near Wyatt.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Willie Mae Brown, 65, of Charleston failed to stop at a stop sign and struck an eastbound tractor-trailer truck driven by J. V. Hood, 55, of Memphis, Tenn., in the side.

Brown suffered moderate injuries and Hood and a passenger in Brown's car, Luther Brown, 67, of Charleston, received minor injuries. They were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A Sikeston woman and her daughter received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 7:35 a.m. Monday in the Tanner community, located at the junction of Route Z and ZZ in Scott County.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Dale L. Hendrix, 33, of Bloomfield failed to stop at a stop sign and was struck in the left side by an eastbound car driven by Kathy M. Duncan, 23, of Sikeston.

The Duncan woman and her one- year - old daughter, Leigh Ann Duncan, received injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Two Fredericktown residents received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 3:50 p.m. Monday six miles northwest of Fredericktown on Route J.

The accident occurred when the driver of a westbound car, Beverly Sue Firbaugh, 20, of Fredericktown, pulled back into the right lane too quickly while passing a car driven by Harmon Layne, 59, of Fredericktown and the right rear wheel of the Firbaugh vehicle struck the front bumper of Layne's car, which was forced off the road.

Both drivers received injuries and were taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown.

Moit charged with murder

BERTRAND — Manuel Allen Moit, 24, was arrested at the family home, here Monday in connection with the shooting death of James Edward "Jamie" Helmes, whose body was found in a drainage ditch near Diehlstadt Sunday.

Making the arrest were Trooper Jerry Crismon of the Highway Patrol, Mississippi County Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons and Scott County Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman.

Charged Monday night with first degree murder in the case, Moit is to be arraigned in Scott County Magistrate Court Wednesday, according to assistant Scott County prosecuting attorney, Steve Taylor.

Heckemeyer loses votes in canvass

Incumbent Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig has apparently extended his narrow lead over challenger Tony Heckemeyer following the canvass of votes in Scott and Mississippi counties.

Heckemeyer lost 14 votes in the Scott County canvass. In Mississippi County, two sets of vote totals, each different, will be forwarded to the secretary of state's office in Jefferson City.

When votes were tabulated after last Tuesday's election, the unofficial count showed Craig ahead in Scott County, 5,136-4,919, and the overall winner in Scott and Mississippi counties by four votes, 7,334-7,330.

Scott County Clerk Bob Kielhofner said today that the canvass conducted Monday by Ollie Amick of Illmo, representing the Democratic Party; George T. Johnson of 403 Dorothy St., Sikeston, representing the Republican Party; and himself showed a 10 fewer votes for Heckemeyer in one precinct, five fewer in another precinct and one additional vote in a third precinct.

Kielhofner said the canvass showed no change for Craig and the amended total in Scott County now favors Craig, 5,136-4,905. He did not release the names of the precincts in which the vote count was changed.

Kielhofner also said the canvassers found a few changes in other races, such as a 32 fewer votes for Billy Joe Thompson and a 30 fewer for John Dennis, the two rivals for state senator of the 27th District, and a 30 additional votes for David Shy in his successful race for the Democratic nomination for prosecuting attorney in Scott County.

Kielhofner said the changes did not affect the unofficial winers of any of the races. He added that the certified tally books will be forwarded to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick today or Wednesday for an official announcement of winners in the primary election.

Mississippi County Clerk Arthur Lee Goodin said today that the official canvass Monday of the Aug. 3 election gave Craig two additional vortes in

Stoddard votes are unchanged

BLOOMFIELD— Votes cast in the Stoddard County primary election Aug. 3 were canvassed Monday, County Clerk John Marvin Capps said today, and not a vote was changed in the countywide or state races.

He said a one-vote difference was found involving a write-in candidate for a committeeman position and one was found involving a proposal constitutional amendment but in neither case did it affect the outcome.

Several of the committeemen and committeewomen elected did not file the proper campaign disclosure forms and it was unclear whether or or not they could take office. Capps said today they could.

He said he had talked with the state election commission about the matter.

He explained that persons nominated to countywide offices are issued a certificate of nomination by his office and in the general election winners are issued a certificate of election, but his office does not issue a certificate of any kind to committeemen and committeewomen.

Thus his office cannot withhold anything from local committeemen elected when they do not comply with the law.

Persons elected who failed to comply with the law include, Fred Wethington and Lois E. Mooney, Democrats of Castor Township, and L. B. Black, Democrat of Pike Township.

Hungate bows out

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Treasurer James Spainhower says "others may come to the forefront" and make themselves available to the state Democratic Committee as possible candidates for the party's U.S. Senate nomination.

So far Spainhower is the only challenger of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes for the nomination left vacant by the death last week of Congressman Jerry Litton.

The Chillicothe Democrat was winning a three-way primary race over Hearnes and U.S. Rep. James Symington, when he was killed with his family in a plane crash.

Fellow Congressman William Hungate took himself out of consideration Monday, saying it was a "difficult decision," but that he could "no longer ask my family to make any additional sacrifices."

Spainhower said the 9th District congressman's announcement was "unfortunate," but "I fully understand his reasons."

Other possible candidates might make themselves available to the committee, Spainhower said in a telephone interview during a pause in a Current River canoe trip near Van Buren.

Admitted to hospital

Judge falls from ladder

BLOOMFIELD— Jack Ward of Route One, judge of Stoddard County Court from the first district, was admitted to Veterans Hospital at Poplar Bluff for tests Monday morning following an accident last week.

Mrs. Ward said today that he is feeling alright, but that he has been dizzy since the accident and that he should be home in a few days.

The accident occurred Wednesday afternoon-the day after he was reelected to office in the county primary election, while he was helping his son remodel his home.

Ward was standing on a ladder, working on a carport, when he fell about 10 feet, hitting his head on the ground.

He was taken to the emergency room of Dexter Memorial Hospital but was sent home without treatment.

His wife finally convinced him to see his private doctor Saturday morning, who advised him to enter the hospital to undergo tests.

He was x-rayed Monday but nothing was found wrong.

Mrs. Ward said that apart from his dizziness, he is doing fine and that after his accident he continued to do some of his work.

However, he did not attend the County Court session on Thursday.

ANTHER DECLARATION

By Howard Flieger

The Economist of London is a serious- voiced weekly newsmagazine which relaxes now and then with a whimiscal parody that probably amuses more people on this side of the Atlantic than on the other.

Although it is weeks now since our anniversary, The Economist's 1976 reconstruction of the 1776 "Declaration of Independence" is an example. It says something about British- American relations that people tend to ignore — a shifting toward the U.S. of the balance between the two English- speaking democracies which, for 200 years, have had a love- hate relationship comfortably uncomfortable to both.

In their issue of July 3, 1976, the editors of The Economist wrote a "Declaration of Dependence" — their present- day adaptation of Thomas Jefferson's words of 1776 that brought England and America to the crux.

This is from The Economist's version:

"When, in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to forge Political Bands linking them with another, and to relinquish their sseparate and equal Station among the Powers of the Earth, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind requires that they should declare the Causes which impel them.

"We hold these Truths to be self- evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creastor with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Tax Loopholes; that to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed; that, whenever any Form of Governmentbecomes destructive of these Ends, it is the Right of the People to alter it...

"The recent History of the Rulers of Great- Britain is a History of repeated Injuries and Usurpations. to prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid World:

"They have erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent out Swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their Substance;

"They have repeatedly and cruelly increased the Price of stamps, thereby effectively levying a Stamp Tax;

"They have reduced the Value of the Pound to just about 1.776 Dollars, which is an excessively Bicentennial Figure;...

"In every stage of these Oppressions, we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble Terms; our repeated Petitions have been answered only be repeated Injury.

"Nor have we been wanting in Attentions to our American brethern. We have reminded them of the Circumstances of our Separation from them... We have appealed to their native justice and Magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the Ties of our common Kindred to forgive and forget the Past...

"We, therefore, the Representatives of Great- Britain, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good People of this Island, solemnly Publish and Declare, That this Island is, and of Right ought to be, the fifty- first State ... of the United States of America and Britain; and that as such it no longer has the Power to levy War, contract Alliances, and do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do.

"And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm Reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence and of the US Nuclear Deterrent, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, what is left of our Fortunes, and what is left of our sacred Honour."

Similar, though not identical, were the vexations that impelled Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and others to pen the American Declaration of Independence from the British Crown two centuries ago.

In doing so in 1776, they didn't have as much fun as The Economist did in 1976.

UNCLE SAM'S SILLY SAFETY RULES

"The safety commission's job is to do what it can to reduce risks at acceptable costs. It should get over the idea it can turn the complex modern world into one great padded cell where even an idiot can do himself no harm."

Thus did Business Week vent its frustration over silly safety proposals offered by the government's Consumer Product Safety Commission. In a May 3 editorial, the magazine detailed the Commission's proposed standards for paper matches, which would require that the match go out within 15 seconds and be enclosed in a childproof box.

"A 15- second match is no good for lighting a pipe, changing a fuse, or finding the car keys you dropped in the dark in the parking lot," editorializes the periodical. "It is a degraded product that will add one more annoyance to the frustrations of modern living."

The match book issue is simply another in a rapidly growing list of proposals thought up by Washington's bureaucrats — goaded by consumer advocate groups — which are loaded with good intentions but awfully short on common sense. The safety commission points to the 10,000 match- related injuries a year in making its proposal. No one questions the desirability of cutting back on such injuries. But wouldn't it be more logical to educate individuals on the use of matches — and to keep them out of children's hands?

This particular controversy is reminiscent of the government's regulation, passed a couple of years ago for a mandatory seatbelt- buzzer system to be installed in new cars by all U.S. manufacturers. The irritating device unnerved so many Americans that there was a massive demand for the law to be stricken from the books — which indeed it was.

Perhaps the leading government villain in the promulgation of silly safety regulations is the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). One recent booklet published by OSHA for farmers, for example, warns them that — horror of horrors — manure is slippery.

Taken together, such bureaucratic nonsense brings back this time- honored thought by Will Rogers: "I don't make jokes. I just watch the government and report the facts."

"Whaddya mean — am I pledged to Ford, Reagan or still uncommitted?"

CENSORSHIP FOE

The death of Morris L. Ernst at the age of 87 in New York serves to recall his outstanding legal championship of freedom of speech and press, but particularly the case of James Joyce's novel "Ulysses." That major work was published in Paris in 1922 but could only be smuggled into the United States because of statutes against obscenity. In 1933, however, Mr. Ernst won a historic opinion from Federal District Judge John M. Woolsey in New York that "Ulysses" was a work of literary merit. Few today would disagree with that, but the historic point of the ruling was that the book had to be considered in its entirety, not in respect to a few words or passages. The opinion that Morris Ernst won has long since become the law of the land and a defense of literature against narrow censorship.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

THE PRISON POPULATION BOOM

From The Horizon
Missouri Division Of Corrections

Partly because of the post-World War II increase in population and a renewed emphasis on punishment, there are more men and women in state and federal prisons today than at any other time in the nation's history. As of Jan. 1 there were approximately a quarter of a million inmates in prisons around the country, 10 per cent more than a year earlier. More than half the prisoners were under 30 years old.

Prison populations declined in the 1960s, despite a rapid growth in the crime rate, as work release, early parole and other rehabilitative programs gained in popularity. The low was reached in late 1968 when 188,000 persons were in prisons. High unemployment and the shift of philosophy in favor of punishment explain some of the prison population increase, but the primary cause is the so-called post-World War II "baby boom," according to the April ussue of Corrections Magazine.

More than half the nation's prison population is between the ages of 17 and 29, according to the publication.

Noting that 23 per cent of the nation's population was in that age group, it said that the nation could expect growing prison populations "at least until 1895." Only California showed a decline in its prison population. State officials attributed the 20 per cent decrease to new parole guidelines. But California still led all states with an inmate population of 20,007. Wyoming, with only 384 persons in state prison, had, at 73 per cent, the highest percentage increase since 1974. But among larger states (in terms of prison populations), South Carolina and Florida were tied for the highest rise at 38 per cent.

During this same period of time, Missouri's prison population rose over 11 per cent, which was the average percentage increase for the nations' prison systems. However, Missouri's prison population has grown substantially since the first of the year and the inmate population now totals over 4600, with the desired capacity being 3890.

EYES ON BONDSMEN

MOST PEOPLE WHO need bail bondsmen don't read lawbooks. So if they don't know there is a new Tennessee law prohibiting a charge of more than 10 per cent of the bond figure that's understandable.

But it's certainly right to expect the bond companies to know the laws under which they operate.

The bail firm that was hauled before Criminal Court Judge William H. Williams claimed it hadn't heard about the state law. It has now.

For this first time there was no punishment.

But let the companies not forget Judge Williams' parting remark: "There are critical eyes on bail bondsmen."

Broader reforms than the limitation on the fee were sought and rejected in the last Tennessee legislature. The kind of over-charging that led to this case suggests the legislature still has work to do.

YANKEE INGENUITY AT WORK

Yankee ingenuity has been the invisible force behind many of man's accomplishments over the years, such as the invention of mass production which revolutionized the industrial world. And now Yankee ingenuity has invaded yet another field: sports. At many U.S. bowling centers, trading stamps have been instituted as a promotional device to capture the interest and patronage of sports enthusiasts.

Bowling centers in approximately 40 states have programs offering trading stamps as tournament prizes, incentives for organizing leagues or learn-to-bowl classes and as bonuses for purchases in the pro shops. The concept originated eight years ago on the West Coast and has subsequently swept the country. According to The National Bowlers Journal of Chicago, Illinois, the widespread use of trading stamps offers "...all sorts of opportunities for the philatelist-bowler to indulge in his two favorite pastimes." Those proprietors who "...wonder how much the stamps eat into their profits are pleasantly surprised to discover the answer is 'zero.'"

At a time of economic uncertainty and shortages, the continued success of a basic institution like trading stamps, as a form of promotion, speaks well for the resiliency of U.S.-style free enterprise. Despite inevitable business pressures and temporary slumps, the trading stamp industry has remained very much alive and is now striking out in new directions, as exemplified by its unique bowling center arrangement. It proves that with Yankee ingenuity on our side, even those persistent prophets of doom do not have a chance.

THOSE MISERABLE TAX COLLECTORS

To find happiness in their work, tax collectors, particularly federal tax collectors since they take the biggest bite out of everyone's income, must surely have a solid streak of sadism at least 8-inches wide right up the middle of their backs. Why, did you know those ornery tax collectors even take the joy out of life for the inveterate gambler who makes a big win after perhaps a lifetime of losing?

A tax newsletter points out that if you play the horses and win over $600 at the racetrack of your choice, an Internal Revenue Service man will probably be there to insist that you declare the winnings immediately. Further, it seems that if you win a large amount like $20,000 you will be able to deduct the losses you suffered on bum horses or bad cards only if you have kept an accurate record of them that will stand up in court. How many people who cash in on a long shot are likely to have maintained a meticulous record of all their failures? Let's face it, the tax collector is likely to be the real winner if you strike it lucky. If you can't beat 'em join 'em--become a tax collector.

SEARCHING FOR BETTER WAYS

Much of our petroleum consumption goes into transportation in the form of gasoline and diesel fuel to run tens of millions of automobiles and trucks. There is no immediate substitute for the internal combustion engine for long haul work. But, nevertheless, electric vehicles with short haul driving ranges of 35 or 40 miles may, to an increasing degree, offer at least a partial solution to gasoline shortages and air pollution problems in metropolitan centers, cities and towns across the United States. There might even be an electric-powered second car in your future.

One of the nation's major electric companies reports that it is using two new electric-run test vans for routine work assignments in its service area. The vans have a top speed of 55 miles per hour and a range of 40 miles when driven at 30 miles per hour. Indications are that they will perform well for light delivery work over short distances. Electric vehicles have another advantage that would work to everyone's benefit. As the company points out, all utilities pay "...round-the-clock expenses on multi-million dollar generating plants which during nighttime hours are used relatively little." The batteries that power electric vehicles could be recharged at night, providing a load for generating equipment that would otherwise be spinning uselessly. By leveling out demand, or in industry jargon, "balancing the load,," electric companies would realize operating economies that would help hold down the cost of electricity per kilowatt-hour to all of its customers.

The electric industry is one of the nation's outstanding leaders, not only in seeking ways to provide the energy that people need, but also in developing new approaches to using more efficiently the energy the U.S. possesses. Experimenting with the use of electric-powered vehicles is just one of hundreds of approaches being explored for the ultimate purpose of helping to assure that energy starvation never becomes part of America's future.

FIRING UP THE SOUTH ON SYNTHETICS

From The Birmingham (Ala.) News

If the U.S. is to solve its problem of meeting the national demand for energy at a cost the nation can afford, coal will have to play a major role because coal is our most abundant fossil fuel.

Coal in its natural state presents problems as a widespread source of energy. Many of those problems can be solved by the conversion of coal, with its ash and smoke, into relatively clean and efficient synthetic gas.

A group of imaginative local businesses, backed by both state and federal authorities, are now embarking on a bold venture to build the first coal-gasification plant in the South. If this venture is successful, it could make an immense contribution toward heating the homes and firing the furnaces of this area for many years to come.

At this stage, the venture requires approval of Dr. Robert Seamans, director of the federal Energy Research and Development Administration. If Mr. Seamans decides the government will support the construction of the plant, production would be possible in six years.

The Energy Research and Development Administration is destined to make a major contribution to the initiatives the future demands in making new energy sources possible. It is to be hoped that Mr. Seamans will give this undertaking the chance to prove successful. Coal gasification will be a reality sooner or later. Why not now?

Visiting a friend who had just retired to a luxurious condominium overlooking the rolling surf of Miami Beach, I couldn't help commenting on the sensuous ocean sounds that were drifting into the room. My friend smiled, and pushed a button alongside his armchair. Instantly, the room became quiet.

"We're too high up to hear much of anything," was his answer to my astonished expression. "What you've been hearing is a phonograph record. We play it almost all the time. If we leave the windows open, the room gets too hot and the salt air rots the carpet."

He pushed another button, and the sound of the surf again seemed to be drifting through that big, sealed picture window, as the sun glistened on the waves.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU WEAR

WASHINGTON — There is something going on in the clothing industry of which you may or may not be aware. Designers and manufacturers are now putting labels on the outside of their clothes instead of on the inside. It started a few years ago when Pierre Cardin, Courreges, Christian Dior, Gucci and others discovered that since women had paid so much for their outfits, they wanted everyone to know where they bought them.

The practice soon spread like wildfire and the saying "You are what you eat" has been replaced by "You are what you wear."

I was at a party the other evening and I noticed a lady with a large "CD" on the back ofher fur coat.

"What a beautiful Christian Dior coat," I aaid.

"How did you know it was a Dior?" she said in amazement.

"I just guessed from the cut of it," I replied. I helped her off with the coat and she gave me her silk scarf. It had "Givenchy" printed all over it.

"What a beautiful Givenchy scarf," I said.

"Oh, is that what it is? I just grabbed one out of a drawer."

"I'd know a Givenchy scarf anywhere. Say, is that a Pucci blouse you have on?"

"Yes, it is. How did you know?"

"It says 'Pucci' on the collar, the sleeves and the cuffs."

"You are observant. You're the first person who ever guessed this blouse came from Pucci."

I blushed modestly and then said, "It goes beautifully with your Diane von Furstenberg skirt."

"Don't tell me your wife has one just like it."

"No, she doesn't. I just noticed the 'DVF' embroidered along the entire hem -- on the outside."

She looked down. "Why, of course. I never noticed that before."

"Would you be insulted if I told you I've never seen anyone look better in Pierre Cardin black silk stockings?"

"Now how on earth did you know they were Cardin stockings?"

I was looking at your Guggi shoes with the big 'G' on each toe and my eye naturally traveled up to the 'C' which is stitched every inch along the seams of your stockings."

"You are the wicked one," she laughed.

"The Courreges leather belt is smashing with your Hermes handbag," I said.

"You have very good eyes," she said.

"I once read a Calvin Klein logo on a woman's sweater 200 feet away," I bragged.

"You're putting me on."

"I am not. This may come as a surprise to you, but I know you're wearing an Oleg Cassini slip."

Her eyes widened in surprise. "How do you know that?"

"I can read his name on the lace through your Pucci blouse."

"You devil you," she parried.

"Don't be embarrassed," I said. "I have Sears Roebuck stamped all over my boxer shorts."

"Well," she said, "I guess there is nothing you don't know about me."

"Yes, there is," I said. "I don't know your name. What is it?"

She gasped, "It's-it's, oh my God, I forgot my own name."

Plumbers Uncover Leaks

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Ex-President Richard Nixon's infamous plumbers, so named because of their efforts to plug White House news leaks, wound up their nefarious works with an investigation of congressional leaks.

Their purpose was to embarrass Nixon's detractors by portraying them as security risks. Instead, the plumbers found Washington so porous that they couldn't sort out all of the leaks. It was "difficult to prove," reported one of their investigators, that any given "leak came from the Hill."

The plumbers' secret findings have a special significance today in light of all the excitement on Capitol Hill over leaks. The House Ethics Committee, suddenly more concerned about leaks than ethics, has invested $150,000 to find out who leaked a House report to CBS newsman Dan Schorr.

Earlier, the committee stopped short of condemning Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., for an alleged leak. And now the Justice Department is investigating Rep. Robert Leggett, D.-Calif., for allegedly leaking classified information to the South Koreans.

All this has got investigators chasing in dizzying circles. For Washington is a Yellowstone of leaks, bubbling here, spouting there, spraying out suppressed information.

The White House plumbers discovered three years ago that government information channels would spring leaks faster than anyone could plug them. The plumbers started out to investigate the leaks on Capitol Hill. Chief plumber David Young sought the help of the Pentagon. He contacted Fred Buzhardt, then the Defense Department's general counsel, who assigned Pentagon investigator W. Donald Stewart to ferret out the security risks in Congress.

Stewart reported back on Feb. 13, 1973, that Capitol Hill was a sieve but that many of the leaks originated in the downtown government agencies, including the Pentagon and the White House.

On the Hill, he found classified documents stored in ordinary cabinets, transmitted without the regulation double envelopes and scattered around offices for any visitor to see.

The Secretary of Defense hasn't given adequate instructions, Stewart suggested, "detailing what can be given or cannot be given to members of Congress or the procedures for transmitting classified documents."

No central index was kept at the Pentagon, he added, to show what classified information had been distributed to congressional offices. As a result, the military brass had no idea what classified data was loose on the Hill.

Stewart found that government agencies often shower congressmen with classified information they don't want. "Many situations arise," he reported, "where members of Congress desire to 'dump' unwanted classified material on military liaison officers on Capitol Hill."

In a lengthy memo, Stewart cited a number of lax security practices in Senate offices. But invariably, he found that leaks had their beginning in the State Department, Defense Department or White House.

For example, he investigated a New York Times leak on July 23, 1971, about the arms limitations talks. He reported that the New York Times correspondent, William Beecher, had been referred by a State Department source to the office of Senator Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The FBI, joining in the probe, spoke to two of the senator's employees. They admitted discussing the subject with Beecher but denied revealing the classified details.

Observed Stewart: "Circumstantial evidence would tend to point the finger at Sen. Jackson, as we had learned that a State Department briefing was held in his office on subject matter with him prior to the publication." But there was no proof.

Stewart also suspected that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had leaked information to reporters about U.S. bases in Spain. But before he could question the suspects, he was headed off by William Macomber, then an Assistant Secretary of State.

According to Stewart's memo, Macomber declared emphatically that then-Foreign Relations Chairman William Fulbright, D-Ark., "would not look favorably on such interviews." The investigation was halted in its tracks.

Stewart also failed to establish that his leading subject, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., leaked stories to the press about the spiraling costs of producing the Air Force C-5A transport plane.

But Stewart learned that the information came from some confidential charts that had been slipped to Proxmire by a person identified only as "hostile toward the Air Force."

Of course, the government uses the classification system to censor embarrassing news, which officials don't want the people to read. The government has the authority to classify embarrassing facts, the ability to shut off channels of information and the power to intimidate sources who could tell the truth.

All these are on the side of the government. Often leaks are necessary to expose corruption and wrongdoing, waste and inefficiency, mismanagement and miscalculations.

Footnote: Spokesmen for Sens. Jackson and Proxmire and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee denied any knowledge of improper leaks.

The committee is composed of representatives of various homemaker groups and program areas in Scott, Mississippi, and Stoddard counties. Those present for the meeting from Scott County were: Mrs. Dorothy James of Sikeston; Mrs. Paul Dugger of Blodgett; Mrs. Carl Clayton of Sikeston; and Mrs. Charles Grojean of New Hamburg. Present from Mississippi County were Mrs. Johnnie Mae Davis of Charleston; Mrs. Surcie Armstrong of Wyatt; and Mrs. Marshall Stone of Charleston. From Stoddard County were Mrs. Stan Lumsden of Bloomfield; Mrs. Rita Bader of Dexter; and Mrs. Brenda Garner of Bloomfield.

The group spent some time discussing various program needs and techniques for reaching different audiences and groups. Following this discussion they recommended that program efforts focus on several different topics which included: personal appearance and self- improvement, fitting and construction techniques, the selection, care and use of sewing equipment, clothing care and laundry aids, consumer information legislative issues and new developments in textiles, and clothing.

It was the consensus of the group that special interest meetings should be continued, that the 1976-77 program should include workshops for teaching skills, mass media such as newpapers and radio be utilized to provide information for homemakers, area summer programs in addition to 4-H and Sew With Cotton be provided for youth groups, and that educational clothing and textiles tours be included if possible in the program.

Ann Landers

Mistress or wife- who should come to dinner?

Dear Ann: Please help me settle an argument with my husband. We have agreed to abide by your decision.

Henry and I are planning a lovely dinner party in our new home. One of his married business associates has a cutie-pie on the side. I say we should invite Mr. Business Associate and his WIFE, not the girlfriend. My husband says Mr. B.A. should be able to bring whoever he chooses -- and he has already said he wants to bring the cutie-pie.

According to my husband, what this man does with his personal life is none of our business. I agree with my husband but it would offend me to have a married man bring his mistress into our home. We will be issuing the invitations by phone soon, so hurry your answer. Who is right? -- Battle Royal In The Bahamas

Dear Royal Battlers: You are -- and don't let the so-and-so grind you down.

What Mr. B. A. does IS none of your business, but to offer hospitality to a married man and his cutie-pie cuts you in on the monkeyshines and gives your unspoken approval to the affair. Steer clear.

Dear Ann Landers: You slay me. Your upper-middle-class upbringing pops up in your column so often it's a hoot. Like again today -- when you advised the woman whose husband takes his 28½ inches of their standard 57-inch bed out of the middle. (They used to sleep cuddled up but now he accuses her of "leaning" on him.)

"Get twin beds," you advised. "But after 20 years the transition should be engineered with imagination and tact." Excellent counsel. But then you come up with the suggestion that the wife buy her husband a whistle to place on his bedisde table and have it engraved with the message, "If you want me, just whistle."

What percentage of your readers can afford to engrave messages on ANYTHING these days? Do you know how much engraving costs per letter? It's time YOU woke up and smelled the coffee. -- Daily Reader In Yuma

Dear Daily: Mea culpa, lovey. Right you are. For those who can't afford engraving, write the message on a piece of paper and tape it to the whistle. It doesn't have to come from Tiffany.

Dear Ann: I am a female, 29 years old, but I really look 19. I'm single, never been married, come from a wonderful family, and was brought up in a very loving atmosphere, with kind and understanding parents and five wonderful brothers and sisters.

Last October, I met the first person in my life who made me feel really alive. We started with the usual conversation. When he asked my age, I lopped off eight years and said "21," because I figured he was about 24.

We began going out a lot. After three weeks he confessed he was only 19. I couldn't believe it. When he said, "Age means nothing," I confessed I was 29.

We continued dating and I assumed everything was fine because he never mentioned my age again. Eight months have passed and I really love this guy. I'm sure he feels the same about me. Last night I asked him when he wanted to get married. He said he could never marry me because of the age difference. I was stunned. What should I do? -- Plus Ten

Dear Plus: Tell him goodbye. If he really loves you he'll be back. If he doesn't, better to find out now.

Bluff hurler pitches one-hitter

Little League tournament opens

A one-hitter by Gowen of Poplar Bluff in the final game of thhe 11-12 year-old division was the highlight of opening night action in the Sikeston Invitational Little League Tournament Monday night at the Sikeston Recreational Complex.

New Madrid, Sikeston's All-Stars and Poplar Bluff all claimed opening-round victories in the 11-12 year-old tournament, while he Sikeston All-Stars and Dexter were the victors in the 9-10 year-old bracket.

Gowen allowed only one baserunner in the game--a two-out single in the third to Chambers--as Poplar Bluff blanked Charleston 11-0 in four innings. Gowen struck out four batters in the game and walked none as he narrowly missed throwing a perfect game. His teammates, meanwhile, scored three in the second, six in the third and two more in the fourth to win it by the ten-run rule. Spencer had two of Poplar Bluff's five hits off Kent, the Charleston loser.

In the first game of the evening, Bloomfield jumped out to a 6-0 first-inning lead, but New Madrid came back with two in the third and seven in the fourth and went on to win 12-7. A home run by Sallenger was the big blow during the fourth-inning uprising by New Madrid, who also scored three times in the fifth to wrap it up. Cox emerged as the winning pitcher, settling down after the shaky first inning.

The Sikeston All-Stars also advanced in the 11-12 year-old division, fipping Bertrand 18-2. The All-Stars scored four times in the first and four more in the second before a ten-run explosion in the thrid put the game away. Bertrand scored both of their runs in the second off winner Bert Perry. Perry had two hits for Sikeston, along with Steve Green and Mark Statler.

In the 9-10 year-old division, Dexter scored nine runs in the top of the sixth to overcome a 17-13 lead and take a 22-18 victory over Bloomfield. Carrigan had a perfect five-for-five night at the plate for Dexter, including a double and a triple. Teammate McBride added four hits as Dexter outslugged Bloomfield in the hit department 20-16. Holtzhouser and Acorn had three hits apiece for Bloomfield.

The Sikeston All-Stars hit New Hamburg with six-run innings in both the third and the fifth as they won a 17-7 decision in the second game. New Hamburg led briefly 6-5 after scoring four in the top of the third, but Sikeston pounced back to put the game away with a half-dozen tallies in the bottom of the inning. Only two of the fourteen Sikeston players seeing action failed to hit safely, and seven players had two hits each.

Opening-round play continues tonight at the complex. At 6:30, Paducah takes on Charleston in the 9-10 year-old division, with the Sikeston Aces following against New Madrid at 8:00. In the 11-12 year-old tournament, Scott City meets the Dexter Americans at 5:30, Paducah takes on Chaffee at 7:15 and the Sikeston Aces play New Hamburg at 9:00.

Grid Cardinals arrive in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League arrived in Japan today to play the San Diego Chargers in the first American professional football game ever played in this country.

The exhibition game will be played at the 50,000-seat Korakuen baseball stadium on the night of Aug. 16.

It will be part of the Japanese observance of the U.S. bicentennial celebrations.

The Cardinals' 130-member delegation includes 60 players, cheer leaders and fans.

The Chargers are scheduled to fly in Thursday.

Saints win playoff opener 4-3

It was ten minutes until game time and the Sikeston Saints didn't have a starting pitcher yet, a situation not too uncommon in the somethimes disorganized world of Bi-State baseball. Then, the ball was handed to Jeff Jackson, a pitcher that hadn't started in a month. With Mike Otten, a secondline pitcher for the visiting Anna team, doing the work for the visitors against the rusty Jackson, a high scoring game was anticipated. The two starters and Sikeston reliever Mitch Walker had different ideas.

Otten hurled a good game for Anna despite taking the loss. And, considering the conditions, Jackson and Walker were outstanding. The 6-foot-3 TRCC product held Anna scoreless for five frames before tiring in the sixth. Then, like a page out of a Frank Merriwell story, Walker rushed to the park from work and set the visitors down without a hit, or run, through the last three-plus innings.

"Both those guys did a great job," said manager Tom Masterson after the 4-3 win.

Rightfielder Stan Hall again swung the clutch bat for the Saints in the come-from-behind win. It was Hall's third hit of the game, a two-out run scoring single in the eighth, that broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Saints a win in the first game of their best of three series against the Illinois squad.

Hall and Grant Dambach had the only extra base hits -- both doubles. It was Dambach who scored the winning run after walking and advancing to second on Bill Schatzley's sacrifice bunt.

"I knew Grant would get on somehow," said a Saints player after the game, in tribute to the shortstop's ability. He did, and two outs late he was knocked in by one of the team's most consistent late-inning performers.

Sikeston takes two days off. Then the team will host Anna again this Thursday night in an 8 p.m. game. A win would clinch the series and put Sikeston in the championship finals against the Cape-Perryville winner.

Cedeno hits for cycle as Astros destroy Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Cesar Cedeno, having already connected once for the cycle in his major league career, found a repeat performance more simple.

"The last time it happened I hit a home run, double and a single," the Houston Astros' center fielder recalled Monday night.

"The last time up I had to hit a triple," he added. "This time it was easier. I was kind of pressing, though. I knew I needed a single."

A one-base Cedeno hit, climaxing his memorable night, came in the eighth inning of a 13-4 Astros runaway facilitated by four St. Louis Cardinal errors.

But until his fusillade was triggered by a first-inning triple off Bob Forsch, 5-7, the wing-footed Cedeno had been struggling to collect any hit at all.

"I didn't get mad. I didn't panic," said Cedeno, who in seven previous games during a losing Houston trip had batted 4-for-28 as his average dipped to .287.

"Everybody that plays this game goes through what I did in San Diego," he added in further reference to his 1-for-22 performance immediately ahead of Monday night.

"It's part of the game. If you don't panic, you'll come out of it," he asserted. "It just takes hard work. The last day I felt like I was swinging a little better."

Cedeno, whose toil included a marathon batting practice session three days earlier, began reaping dividends in rapid fashion.

Forsch jammed the Houston hitter with a fast ball in the leadoff inning but watched helplessly as the delivery was blooped into the right field bullpen area for a triple.

The Cards pitcher won out in the next confrontation, retiring Cedeno on a foul, but was raked for his opponent's 16th home run of the season in the fourth.

Then in the seventh, with the clubs tied 2-2, Cedeno's most damaging blow was struck in the form of a two-out double which scored three runs following two singles and a St. Louis error.

SFSL race is up for grabs

Does anybody want to win first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball Leauge?

That seems to be THE question as the league race winds down to a close this week and next. Steward Steel held a game - and- a - half lead appeared to be ready to make a little breathing room between themselves and the pack, but no more. Steward suffered 8-1 setback Monday night at the hands of lightly- regarded Security National Bank and saw their lead dwindle to a full game. Fourth-place Bank of Sikeston dumped the 76-ers 8-1 in the other game of the evening.

Don Taylor, who had two triples and a single on the evening for Security National, ripped one of his three- baggers with the bases loaded in the fourth to drive in three of the six runs that inning. The winners also scored one in the sixth and one in the seventh in support of winning pitcher Jim Hill, who allowed only a first- inning tally. Vernie Dean got the loss.

The Bank of Sikeston scored three in the first and three in the second as they went on to down Steward Steel 8-1. Dave Mulcahy outpitched Tom Stinnett to get the victory. Ken Scheeter was two- for - three at the plate for the winners.

Steward Steel now has a 14-6 record, while Marks Food Mart stands at 13-7 and a game behind. Tied in the loss column and also a game out is the Eagles, who are 12-6. Bank of Sikeston is now 12-8 and are two games out. Marks and Steward square off tonight in a crucial game for both teams at 9:30. The Eagles play Eby's Distributing in the other game.

No-hitter vs. Dodgers sweet for 'Candy Man'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It was "Candy Night" at Three Rivers Stadium and Pittsburgh Pirate left-hander John Candelaria gave everyone a treat.

The first 10,000 fans entering the stadium Monday night received a free candy bar in honor of the occasion and Candelaria followed that up by pitching a 2-0, no-hitter over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I've been dreaming about this since I was five years old," said the 22-year-old pitcher known as "The Candy Man" to Pirate fans. "I don't know if I'll come down. It's going to take a while to realize what's happened."

Only in his second major league season, Candelaria, 11-4, became the first Pirate pitcher to throw a no-hitter in Pittsburgh since Nick Maddox accomplished the feat at old Exposition Park in 1907.

He extended Los Angeles' losing streak to six games as he walked one batter and struck out seven. With the exception of the third inning, Candelaria retired the Dodgers in order.

A walk to Steve Yeager and two Pirate errors loaded the bases before Candelaria got Bill Russell to ground out to end the inning.

In the first inning, Al Oliver made a running grab of Davy Lopes' fly ball and Dave Parker made a shoestring catch of Ted Sizemore's sinking liner to snuff out possible hits.

Frank Taveras caught a line drive off Sizemore's bat in the sixth and Oliver ranged far to his left to make a running catch of Ron Cey's fly ball an inning later.

The last out in the ninth was also the last threat to the nohitter. Russell blooped a fly to center that Oliver gloved after nearly colliding with Taveras at shortstop.

"I looked out and thought, 'That's a heck of a way to lose it,' " Candelaria said.

When Oliver made the catch, Candelaria jumped into the air and the celebration began.

His teammates made a path of white towels extending from the clubhouse door to Candeparia's locker and added a few candy bars along the way to keep up the spirit of "Candy Night."

Candelaria sat down, opened a can of beer and promised it wouldn't be his last.

"I'm gonna drink beer all night," he said with a broad grin. "I don't think anyone can blame me."

In other National League games, the Houston Astros routed the St. Louis Cardinals 13-4 and the Montreal Expos nipped the San Francisco Giants 2-1. In the American League, the Kansas City Royals beat the New York Yankees 8-2; the Texas Rangers crushed the Detroit Tigers 8-1 and the Cleveland Indians turned back the Chicago White Sox 4-2.

Royals flex their muscles vs. Yanks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have had their way with the New York Yankees this season, but Billy Martin says it could be a different story when the American League playoffs roll around.

"There'll be a little different type of adrenalin going in the playoffs," said Martin, the Yankees manager. "Maybe our luck will change.

"So far we haven't had any luck. None whatsoever. Maybe it's better that they have the luck now."

Martin's remarks came after the Royals battered New York hurlers for 12 hits in handing the Yankees their fourth straight setback, 8-2, in a nationally televised contest Monday night.

It was the seventh Kansas City victory over the Yankees in 10 games this season, but neither Martin nor Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog were too excited.

"If it goes right down to it, the team that has the best pitching will win," said Martin. "I think we have an edge there."

Kansas City took a league-leading 3.16 earned run average into the game, while the Yankees stood at 3.18, despite a recent streak in which they have lost 11 of 15 contests.

But Martin said the Yankees had the Royals outnumbered when it came to clutch, "money" pitchers.

"Catfish (Hunter), (Ken) Holtzman both fit that category, and so does (Ed) Figueroa," he said. "I don't think they can match us with three pitchers like that, not with (Steve) Busby out."

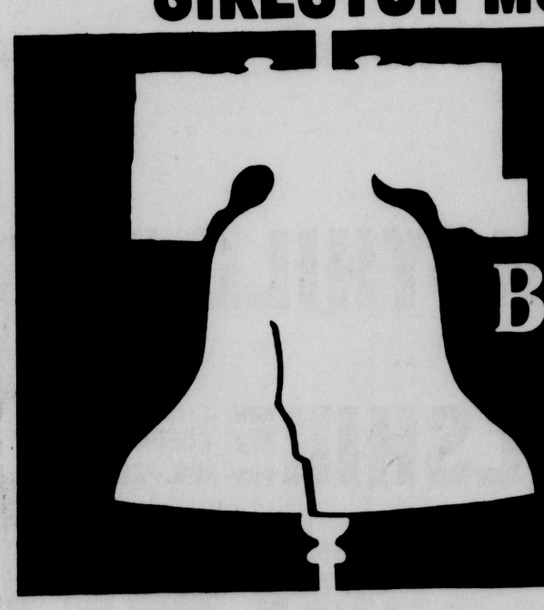

Herzog, whose squad boosted its advantage in the American League West to 10½ games, has been playing down his team's playoff chances, but he did allow himself a cautious reference.

"If we're both fortunate enough to get in the playoffs, it will be nothing to nothing when we start," he said. "In all the games we've played, we're 7-3 against them, but this was the first game that wasn't a barnburner."

CIRCUIT COURT

BLOOMFIELD — A total of $30,000 in damages was awarded to Kyle Borders and his mother, Sandra Borders, by Judge Flake Haney last week in a Stoddard County Circuit Court civil suit agains Malden Wholesale foods inc.

Borders and his mother claimed in their petition that on Oct. 6, 1975, a truck operated by C. Jerome Wilburn, an employe of Malden Wholesale Foods Inc., collided with a school bus on which Kyle Borders was a passenger, and that the accident was due to carelessness on the part of Wilburn.

The suit stated that Borders had suffered serious injuries and that his mother had to pay the medical bills.

They had asked for $250,000 in damages for Borders and $50,000 in damages for Mrs. Borders.

Borders was awarded $25,000, and his mother was awarded $5,000.

Although the final judgment was greatly reduced from the amount sought, officials at the circuit clerk's office said the judgment was still one of the largest awarded in the county in recent years.

What's the law?

Case of the free kick

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Barry was a city slicker who got a kick out of walking in the country. Getting a kick out of a horse, however, completely surprised him. As he was walking past Farmer Brown's pasture, a horse suddenly strolled up and booted him.

Limping to the nearest courthouse, Barry sued Farmer Brown for his injuries.

"I was really tagged by that nag," he complained to a judge. "He was a real mean critter. You could see it in his sneering expression after he clobbered me."

"Nonsense!" was Farmer Brown's answer. "That was my horse, George. He's as gentle as a lamb. When he lifted his leg, it was probably only to shoo away a fly. Under the circumstances, I can't be held liable for what happened."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold Farmer Brown responsible for his horse's having booted Barry?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while the dog's common law or primitive privilege to a first free bite has been, for the most part, taken away from him in this state, there has been no modification as to the right of a horse to his first free kick. Besides, noted the judge, there was no evidence shown that George had a vicious or mischievous disposition so as to make Farmer Brown otherwise responsible. George's good character stood unimpeached.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 10th, the 223rd day of 1976. There are 143 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, the Japanese offered to surrender in World War II if the Emperor would be permitted to keep his throne.

On this date:

In 1821, Missouri became the 24th state.

In 1845, the U.S. Naval Academy was established at Annapolis, Md.

In 1846, Congress created the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

In 1914, France declared war on Austria-Hungary at the start of World War I.

In 1921, Franklin Roosevelt was stricken with polio at his summer home at Campobello Island in Canada.

In 1967, the people of Gibraltar voted to retain their link with Britain rather than return to Spanish sovereignty.

Ten years ago: U.S. Marines and South Koreans smashed Communist forces in separate battles in South Vietnam, killing 310 of the enemy.

Five years ago: Two buildings were destroyed by fire and two prisoners were critically stabbed during four hours of rioting at an Idaho penitentiary.

One year ago, Dmitri Shostakovich, the most famous of contemporary Soviet composers, died after a serious illness, at the age of 68.

Today's birthdays: Former movie star Norma Shearer is 72 years old. Singer Eddie Fisher is 48.

Thought for today: We have but one police force, the American woman — the late President Herbert Hoover.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, Savannah, Ga., held a day long celebration in honor of the Declaration of Independence.

Hat Designer Says Young Starting To Dress Up More

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Olive, a big man who has made it big in the world of millinery design, started out small — in a 65- by 84-inch "salon."

"I had my own shop in an old popcorn stand I rented in Greenwich Village. There was room for only one customer at a time," recalls the 190-pound, 6-foot-1 Olive.

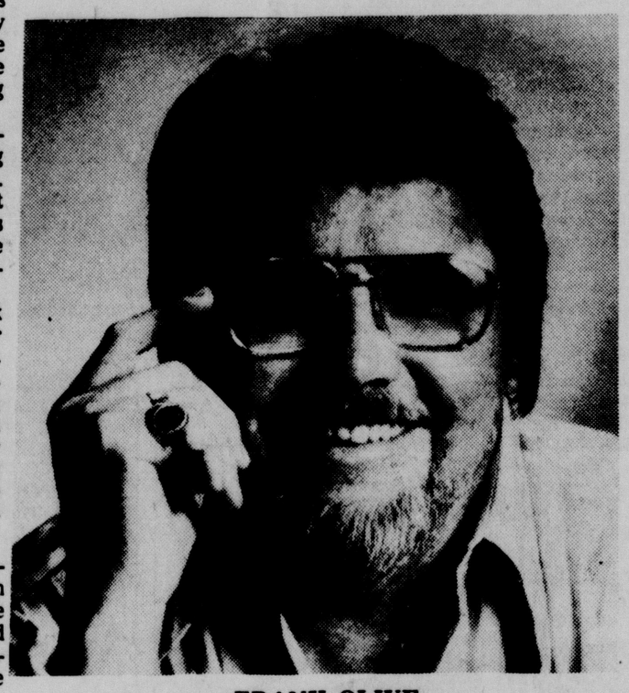

He sold hats and accessories — scarves, blouses and jewelry — which he made in the little room he lived in, where there was barely room for his sewing machine.

Olive started out as a costume designer, after studying at the Art Institute in Chicago. Working for "anything that came along" from opera to Las Vegas night club reviews, he sketched, designed, fitted, remade and improvised.

"Then I came to New York thinking they were waiting for me," says the personable designer, who wears steelrimmed glasses, a mustache and goatee. "But they didn't even know I was here and in order to survive I started making sketches for Seventh Avenue (New York City's garment district)."

Famed couturier Norman Norell asked whose hats were on the sketches and when he learned Olive had originated the designs to "balance the figures" suggested he go into the hat design field.

"In school we had had to learn to make everything, including hats and shoes, but I had never really made hats before," says Olive, who took an apprenticeship with hat designer Chanda. "I got a workaday knowledge of hat production there, but it took another 15 years to learn, working in the custom department of stores and for top hat designers."

FRANK OLIVE

Olive remembers the first hat he ever made — a saucy little Easter sailor, navy, trimmed with navy veiling with white polka dots, a white dove and navy blue bird perched on the crown.

"I was on a bus and saw a lady walking on Fifth Avenue, wearing my hat with the veil on backward and I could hardly wait to get off and tell her so," he says with a laugh. "I caught up with her and she only said, 'Oh, but that's how I prefer to wear it,'"

Now he designs 95 per cent for the wholesale trade, while the rest is custom work. And he travels some 20 weeks a year for in-store, television and charitable function appearances "to educate myself as to the needs of women from Oshkosh to Beverly Hills and to serve as ambassador for my product.

"The younger customer is dressing again," he reports. "Your rebellious flower child with the thrift shop granny dresses is conforming more now, though not losing her originality.

"She knows she doesn't have to wear a navy hat, shoes, gloves, all matching. She'll wear jeans with a designer belt and a great antique bracelet with utilitarian things and mix it all together. She doesn't have Sunday best."

Olive, who has recently started designing "soft and comfortable" hats to go with airline uniforms keeps in close touch with fashion trends.

"I work with the major designers, with fiber people, with shoe people. I take what I know of fashion trends, and accessorize the head for the proper balance," he explains.

Olive says hats should fit a woman's lifestyle as well as suit her costume. "Remember, a hat is an accessory; it must not dominate either you or your costume," he adds.

The 40-year-old bachelor, who has an apartment in Manhattan, enjoys cooking, growing plants and doing gros point rugs.

"I've already done 13 area rugs in my own design," he says. "Eight are in my big living room and five are in the closet."

Chicago Is Still A Toddlin' Group

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

Chicago, an eight-man group without a superstar member, is itself a star. Concerts sell out. Records go gold. Every album is gold and the ninth one, "Chicago's Greatest Hits," is estimated to have sold about three million copies.

It became the No. 1 best-selling album in December, was 2 in January, 4 in February and in March was still sliding very slowly, from 7 to 9. Two singles are gold also, "Just You 'n Me" and "Saturday in the Park."

Chicago has its original members plus one added later, Brazilian percussionist Laudir de Oliveira, its early benefactor James Guercio, who has produced all the records, and its original record company, Columbia, an unusual history for a rock group.

Chicago got together, in Chicago, to play something now called jazz rock. Then its members knew they wanted to play rock plus horn arrangements. Some had gone to DePaul University and Robert Lamm, who acts as group spokesman and plays keyboards and sings, had gone to Roosevelt, across the street. Lamm writes about 60 per cent of Chicago's tunes and is the only one who has made a solo album, "Skinny Boy," Columbia.

Guercio had left DePaul to play classical guitar, manage Chad and Jeremy and the Buckinghams and write songs for both. "We were playing clubs in the Midwest," Lamm recalls, "and Walter and Terry called Jimmie in New York and said he should hear us. He heard us in Niles, Mich., and liked it and signed us up."

Other group members are James Pankow, Daniel Seraphine, Lee Loughnane, Walt Parazaider, Terry Kath and Peter Cetera.

Lamm also recalls where Chicago was when it heard the first album by Blood, Sweat and Tears, which also had formed to bring together jazz and rock.

"We were playing Milwaukee, this pretty big show club, where we got fired. By that time we had enlarged our repertoire and were doing arrangements of Jimi Hendrix tunes with brass. At one set there were a couple of businessmen in the club and the owner came up and told us to play a couple of slow tunes. We did 'How Could I Be Such a Fool?', which is really nice, in three-quarter time, by Frank Zappa. The owner freaked. He wanted 'Moonlight in Vermont' or 'Misty.' He came up and started yelling."

With that incident recalled by the mention of the first Blood, Sweat and Tears album, Lamm says, "We were impressed by it. We were relieved that they were nothing like us, so no problem. We were perhaps a little disappointed a brass band combining jazz with rock had got recorded before we had a chance to. We knew we were going to record. It turned out to be a year and a half away."

Guercio moved Chicago to Los Angeles, put them in a house and paid the rent, gave each member $35 a week spending money and took care of big bills for a year and a half. "He put up, and here we are," Lamm says. "It's a lot because of him. More than being a producer, he has been a friend. It gets to be complicated doing business with somebody who is your friend and who helped you, but the relationship has survived."

It's also difficult sometimes for musical group members to get along. Lamm attributes Chicago's success there to "everybody in the band really being like brothers and being an uncle to each other's kids. Personally and musically, we're a family."

When they got to Los Angeles, Chicago began performing. "We wound up as the house band at the Whiskey a Go Go on Monday and Tuesday nights. That was an important place for up-and-coming groups to play. The owner was from Chicago; that may have helped.

"Jimi Hendrix came to see us. Kath was his favorite guitar player. That was our first tour, opening for Jimi, for $750 a night for the group."

The first album was released in 1969, "The Chicago Transit Authority," then the group shortened its name to Chicago and albums since have been entitled "Chicago," "Chicago III," "Chicago at Carnegie Hall," then all the rest have numbers. "Chicago IV" doesn't sound as dated in later years as if some catch phrase of that time had been used, Lamm says.

Robert Lamm

BICENTENNIAL SALUTE—Amy Schwendimann, 10, of Richardson, Tex., won a prize in a nationwide contest on "The Spirit of '76" with this cigar-box house showing Betsy Ross and the Revolutionary-era flag.

Red, White and Glue Shows Kids' Spirit

NEW YORK (AP) — One million of the nation's junior craftsmen from 40,000 schools have illustrated their concept of "The Spirit of '76" by glueing such material as bread dough, clothespins, matches, cigar boxes, pennies, popsicle sticks and papier mache for entries in a national Bicentennial contest.

Third-grader Matthew McCommas, 8, of Cleveland, Ohio, used layers of burnt-edged wooden matches to make an American eagle with the message "Freedom's Wings 1776-1976" printed on a streamer in the bird's beak.

Matches were used in another way by Allen Smith, also 8 and in the third grade in Shrewsbury, Pa. He crafted an American flag with blue and red match tips and had 13 stars circling "1776" on natural wood match ends. Rows of red and natural match tips were lined up for stripes.

Tara Martinez, 9, fourth-grader of Gonzalez, La., made a mouth-watering white birthday cake that looked as though it were topped with flaked coconut. Circular, it was covered with torn tissue flakes with red and blue stars glued on each "slice."

Old, Old Wine

In the Tuscany hills of Italy where the Cianti wine grape is grown, paleontologists have discovered a million-year-old fossil grape vine they think may be an ancestor of the same "Vitis vinifera" cultivated there today.

Swine flu bill goes to legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are preparing to take action on a bill that would clear the way for a government-sponsored inoculation program to protect nearly every American against a deadly strain of swine flu.

Both the House and Senate planned action today on a federal liability insurance plan that would protect the manufacturers of the swine flu vaccine from legal action by those who are inoculated.

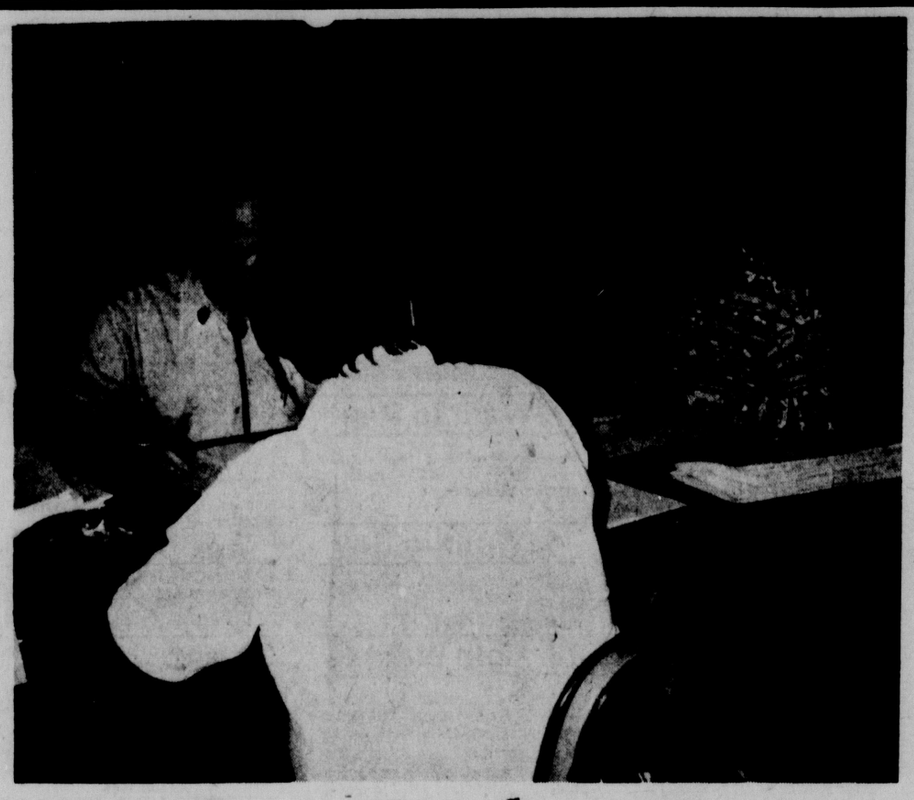

If Congress doesn't pass the bill today, it will have to wait until members return from the Republican National Convention. The Ford administration and backers of the inoculation plan say that would mean more delay before the vaccine could be distributed.

The insurance problem has stalled the vaccine program for weeks.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chairman of the House Commerce Committee's subcommittee on health, indicated there could be some problem getting the measure out of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and onto the House floor.

"Certainly time is not on our side," said Rogers, before trying to get the measure to the awi "But I think we will be successful."

Health officials say zhat if the inoculation program beginssbw it still will be late September before the first vaccine is ready.

Canvassing the votes

Ballots of the Aug. 3 primary election were canvassed Monday at the Scott County Courthouse. Although the canvass resulted in changes in the number of votes cast for some candidates, unofficial winners named after the election last Tuesday were not altered. Conducting the canvass, from left, are George T. Johnson of Sikeston, representing the Republican Party; County Clerk Bob Kielhofner; and Ollie Amick of Illmo, Democratic Party representative.

Broken machine caused the delayed flash flood warning

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — A broken National Weather Service machine caused a delayed warning for residents of the Big Thompson Canyon the night a flash flood struck the area, the Rocky Mountain News reported Tuesday.

The paper quoted Robert Beck of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration as saying a broken remote radar transmitter in Limon, Colo., cost the Denver forecaster on duty some precision in pinpointing severe weather and also slowed his work.

Beck is directing the disaster investigation team probing the performance of the Denver office of the weather service in the flood, which claimed at least 89 lives and caused more than $28 million in damage.

Three more bodies were pulled from the flood debris in the canyon Monday as workers in a makeshift morgue continued efforts at identifying the dead. Sixty-three victims have been identified, although only 58 names have been released.

Two firms with government contracts moved into the canyon to begin cleanup operations. The firms, receiving a total of $134,300, were expected to take two weeks to clear out the tons of debris deposited by the 12-foot wall of water that flashed down the 30-mile canyon.

The American Red Cross still has about 80 names on missing persons lists, but officials believe most of those persons escaped the flood without notifying them.

Weather service forecaster John Schwab, said he didn't think the balky machine 90 miles from his office "was a big factor" when he worked to provide weather warnings on the night of the flood.

But Beck said his team was unanimous in deciding the broken-down machine "did degrade the capability of Mr. Schwab to get a precise warning out as quickly as he would have been able to if he had it (the machine."

Ford forces counter advance VP proposal

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford's campaign strategists, trying to counter a move to require advance announcement of his vice presidential choice, are holding out the longshot possibility that Ronald Reagan might wind up as his running mate.

That couldn't happen if the choice had to be disclosed before the presidential nomination is settled — so the Ford men say some Reagan delegates may wind up voting against the rule proposed by the challenger's campaign manager.

They're ready to fight all week — and they may have to — against the vice presidential rule proposed by John P. Sears, who wants the Republican National Convention to require that candidates name their running mate at least a half-day in advance of the roll call on the Whit emnation. White House nomination.

With that maneuver, and with pressure in the platform committee, the Reagan camp is testing Ford's clout in convention preliminaries, hoping to gain strength for the main event.

The process continued today, as a Republican rules committee considered a requirement that delegates be compelled to vote in accordance with the verdicts of binding primary elections in 20 states.

Otherwise, delegates now bound to one candidate by primary election could be freed to switch to the other, with Reagan the likely beneficiary. Ford supports the rule binding the delegate votes, Reagan opposes it.

The surprise vice presidential proposal Sears advanced on Monday would make the rule moot anyhow by declaring that no delegate could be bound to support a presidential candidate who failed to name his vice presidential choice by 9 a.m. on the day of presidential nomination, Aug. 18 in this case.

Reagan already has named his, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Ford has said he will stick to the traditional route and will disclose his choice after the presidential nomination.

"It's an attempt by Sears to write a rule that would force us to make the same mistake Reagan did," said Peter Kaye, spokesman for the Ford campaign.

Two of the six members of Ford's board of convention strategy cited the possibility of a Reagan vice presidential nomination in forecasting defeat of the Sears proposal.

Reagan has said he would not accept the vice presidential nomination, and a top aide said he means it. Ford at one point said he accepted Reagan at his word. He now has asked for financial and health information from more than a dozen Republicans he is considering as possible vice presidential choices.

Richard Hermann of Lincoln, Neb., who is handling convention rules strategy for the Ford campaign, said that doesn't mean that Reagan is out as a potential running mate. Hermann said some Reagan delegates want their man in second place if he can't win the top spot, and therefore will vote against the Sears proposal.

Dean Burch, a former White House aide and another member of the Ford strategy panel, added that despite the customary denials "it is not unusual that candidates for president wind up on the same ticket."

one tally book, giving him a total of 2,200 in that county. However, the second tally book agreed with the unofficial total of 2,198 votes reported last week.

Tally book for challenger Tony Heckemeyer also differed from the unofficial count of 2,411. The canvass gave him 2,410 votes in one book and 2,412 in the other.

Goodin said he would certify two totals when he forwards the tally books to the secretary of state's office today.

Producers may raise gas prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Natural gas producers are free to raise gas prices if they first agree to refund the money in case the Federal Power Commission eventually decides the price is too high.

A federal appeals court cleared the way Monday for a new price ceiling approved by the FPC July 27 to go into effect but attached a condition designed to protect consumers.

The three-judge court ruled that producers raising their prices to the new ceiling must agree to refund the excess money if the power commission decides on appeal that it set the ceiling too high. Producers who refuse to agree to the refund provision would be barred from raising prices until the commission rules on the appeal.

It was not immediately known which option the producers will select.

The increase approved July 27 would increase the average cost of natural gas by 4 to 8 per cent this coming year.

Some Missouri delegates are still undecided

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — There's less than a week remaining before delegates gather for the GOP National Convention, but Missouri still has four members who say publicly they don't know who they'll support for the presidential nomination.

But one of those has already made a decision and another says he hopes to make one in the next few days.

"I'm not going to divulge my decision until the convention," said Marlene Zinzel, an at-large delegate from the 3rd District of south St. Louis. "I sat down and put a few things together and decided that I'd probably go one way, and I'm not going to say which way that is."

When she was selected at the GOP State Convention in Springfield June 12, Mrs. Zinzel was listed on the slate of delegates supporting Ronald Reagan. A few days after the convention she announced that she was uncommitted.

Missouri will send 49 delegates to the convention in Kansas City next Monday. Of those, 29 are for the former California governor, 16 support President Ford and four are uncommitted.

The other three unpledged delegates are also from the 3rd District, although unlike Mrs. Zinzel, they were selected at a congressional district caucus in May.

William Skaggs said he hoped to make a decision "in the next few days."

"I really have no intentions of arriving in Kansas City uncommitted," Skaggs said. "I'd like to get this thing over with as soon as possible."

Skaggs was asked what kind of considerations he was giving before deciding whom to vote for.

"Nothing we could talk about," he replied.

William Olenyik, another uncommitted delegate, said he was still undecided despite his newspaper poll which showed a margin of 6-1 in support of Reagan. He said about 65 persons participated in the poll.

Olenyik said he was not going to make a decision "until I get up there and find out what the rest of the country is doing."

Fred Whaley was unavailable for comment. His home residence telephone number had been disconnected, and a spokesman at his contracting business office said Whaley was ill and would be out of touch "for a few days."

Repeated efforts to reach Whaley late last week were also unsuccessful.

Joe Swarts is a Reagan delegate, but is leaning to Ford. The Kansas City resident said he would not switch his preference to the President unless a majority of those who selected him would ask him to do so.

Bond is approached for VP post

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Gov. Christopher Bond has been asked by the White House staff if he is interested in the Republican vice presidential nomination, a Bond aide said Monday.

"He said he was very proud and honored to have been included but would not comment further," Bruce Blomgren, the Bond aide, said.

Bond is one of several candidates contacted by the Ford Administration, including Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

Bond was contacted by the White House while vacationing in Idaho. He arrived in Kansas City Monday.

The 37-year-old governor was mentioned as a vice presidential possibility when Ford first took office. However, Ford picked Nelson Rockefeller.

Bond's name was mentioned earlier this year as a vice presidential possibility, but Bond discounted that speculation, saying he didn't foresee himself doing anything other than running for a second term as governor.

East Prairie CB'ers to host jamboree

EAST PRAIRIE — The East Prairie Screaming Eagles Citizens Band Club will host its first jamboree Saturday from 2 to 9 p.m. in the A. J. Martin Elementary School cafeteria.

The event, planned as an annual affair, will feature door prizes, cake walks, jail house, children's games, food and free coffee.

CB equipment will also be displayed and three pieces will be given away. First prize will be a 23- channel base radio, second prize is a mobile unit and third prize will be a power microphone.

Trophies will be given for the oldest licensed CB operator, best dressed child (age 2-6), largest clubs in matching uniform (in state and out of state), best dressed club (six members or more) and the club traveling the longest distance (six members or more).

Guests do not have to be a member of any club to attend, and there is no admission fee.

Store clerk is killed by robbers

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 79-year- old man working in a liquor store was shot and killed Saturday night during an attempted robbery, according to police.

Authorities said Lawrence Hitt, an employe of the Argo Package Store for 20 years, was killed about 10:55 p.m. Saturday during a scuffle with two robbers who fled without taking any money.

Police said Hitt was killed by a single bullet when he resisted a command to lie on the floor. Hit was shot by one of the men while the other was trying to open the cash register. Both men fled without opening the register.

'Redneck National Anthem' is written by a redneck

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Vernon Oxford is a redneck and proud of it.

Oxford is an easygoing, slender 35-year-old native of the Ozark Mountains who's as country as cornbread and has a top single on the charts, "Redneck! (The Redneck National Anthem)."

"A redneck is someone who enjoys country music and likes beer," he said as he relaxed on a sofa at a Music Row record company. "I don't mind being called a redneck. I'm proud of it."

Oxford, who appears occasionally on the Grand Ole Opry, has fulfilled the dream of thousands. In 1964, he left a $1.35-an-hour job as a shipping clerk in Wichita, Kan., bought a little trailer and headed for Nashville and a country music career.

Guitar in hand, he appeared at the RCA studio and told the receptionist he'd like to record.

"I guess my approach surprised them," he recalled. "The woman looked at me kind of funny, then went to another room to get Bob Ferguson (a producer). He told me to stay around, check around and come back if I didn't find anything else."

Some 18 months later, RCA signed him to a contract and he lasted two years. He then began making a living by painting and hanging sheet rock.

In 1974, he became popular in England when a two-album set was released in the overseas market. Last fall, he had his first hit in America, "The Shadows of My Mind."

He didn't quit his job painting and hanging sheet rock until early this year, and even then some parts of the job stuck with him.

He once walked into a building with a group of record producers, the pressures of recording seemingly weighing heavily on their minds. Oxford, though, was studying the ceiling. "It sure would take a long time to hang that ceiling," he remarked.

"You hear a lot of stories about me," he said sheepishly. "I am just what I am — not much, I guess."

One story concerns a problem Oxford had last year, when a single he recorded, "I Wish You Would Leave Me Alone," was rejected by some country music stations for being "too country."

"Redneck! (The Redneck National Anthem)" has been his biggest hit and he usually gets a spirited reaction from the audience when he sings it.

"I sang it in Houston the other night and I asked the rednecks to stand up and salute," he recalled. "So this guy stood up and put his hand over his heart through the whole song."

Some music industry executives believe there may be a "outlaw" genre.

Kelly says he will remain FBI head

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley says he does not plan to follow the practice of some heads of federal agencies and submit a routine resignation if a new president is elected in November.

On the contrary, Kelley said he plans to stay on the job as long as his health is good and he thinks he can serve.

Speaking Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation," the chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said some subordinates "knowingly deceived" him when they told him that burglaries conducted by the agency had ended in 1966.

He has since acknowledged that such break-ins occurred as recently as 1973, the year he was appointed director.

Saying he does not condone the deception, Kelley vowed, "If I find those who have knowledgeably, knowingly deceived me, some action will be taken." But he observed that people are reluctant to confess to actions that might result in prosecution.

Since Kelley took over the agency, the FBI has been the focus of inquiries into burglaries by bureau agents and allegations of financial wrongdoing and other abuses by present and former bureau officials.

Asked about a recent burglary in Denver by an FBI informant, Kelley said such an action by an agent would be improper and therefore it was improper for an informant. Kelley said he didn't know if the agent concerned knew of the burglary plan in advance, but that the agent is no longer handling informants.

Kelley declined comment on the firing of former Assistant Director Nicholas P. Callahan, saying he is the subject of an investigation.

Kelley said that as many as three or four agents may be disciplined as a result of continuing inquiries into alleged FBI abuses.

Soap opera writers are not all tormented New Yorkers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Most soap operas are taped in New York, and their characters and plots have much grief and woe. It must mean all their writers are tormented New Yorkers, reflecting the travails of Fun City.

Guess again. Case in point: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Soderberg, head writers on CBS' "As the World Turns." They say they're quite happy.

They should be. Their show is taped in New York, but they cook up its daily diet of angst from 2,800 miles away, working at their home in the pleasant, unhurried coastal city of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Soderberg only laughed when a caller suggested it must be awful hard in all that tranquility for him and the Mrs. to compose daily difficulties acted out in the frenetic, nervous hamlet of New York.

"No, there's an advantage to it," he said. "We're more out in the world than you are if you're in the world where they make the show.

"Very often, we'll say (to the show's East Coast end), 'Please look out the window and see what the rest of the world is doing.' Sometimes there are little everyday things you don't see or do in New York."

And, he said, the community in which he and his wife live "pretty much reflects everyday stories" of the sort going round and round on "As the World Turns," a show they've been lead writers on for three years.

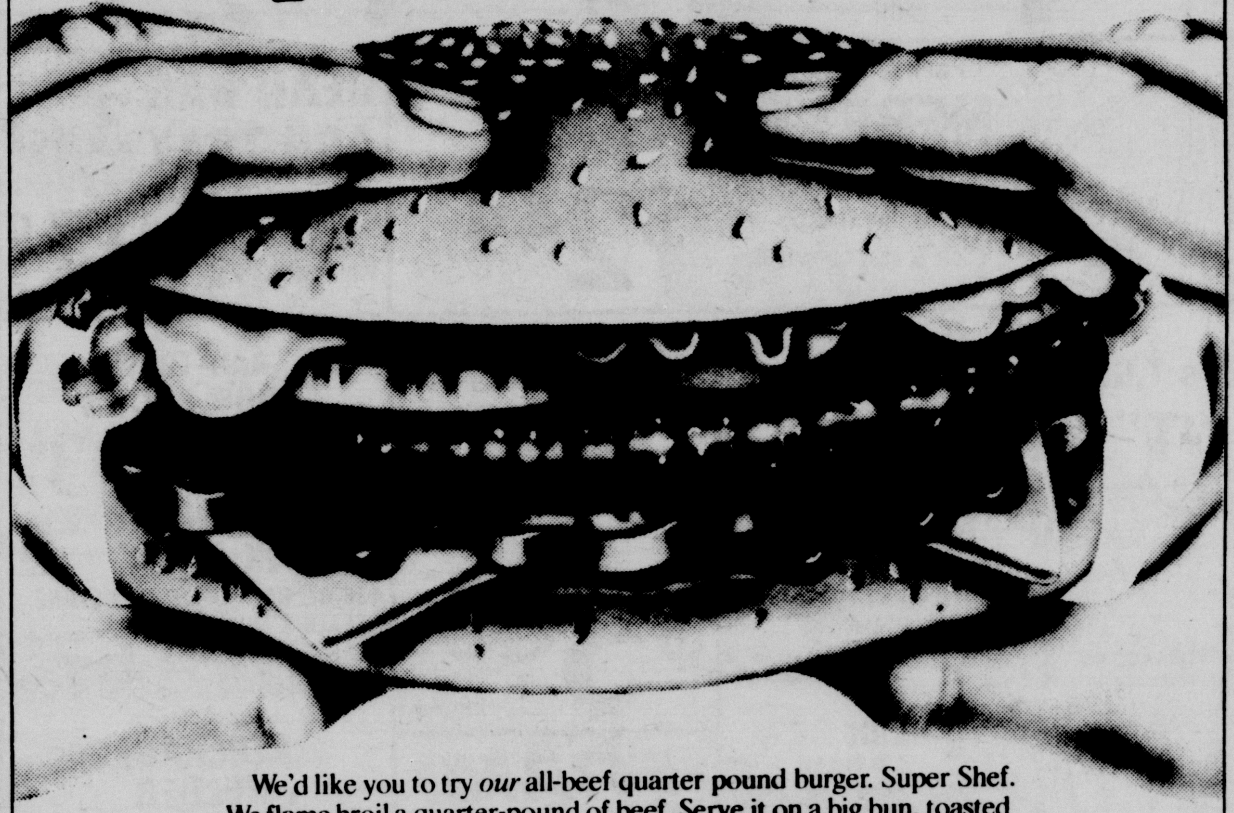

The Soderbergs have been writing for 30 years, and married for 26 years, but they only began writing soaps together eight years ago when they started as a team on "Guiding Light."

How do they put together their New York shows from California?

Soderberg says it works this way: They create what they call "the long-term story," which charts the course of the plots, subplots, stars and lesser players for as much as a year in advance.

Then they outline every act in each show, writing a detailed daily outline concerning what the day's plot and characters are up to, occasionally tossing in suggested lines of dialogue.

Researchers debate increase in gardening

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is money, taste buds, "lifestyle" or relaxation the primary push behind the growth in home gardening? Who's doing it and who isn't?

Researchers and social science analysts in the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service are working on those questions to provide answers for the food and gardening industries.

Preliminary findings indicate that in 1974, the second of two years of 14.5 per cent average jumps in retail food prices, 43 per cent of U.S. households planted a garden. That's about 30 million families of various sizes.

This year, surveys in April, May and June indicated about 48 per cent of U.S. families had gardens planted or intended to plant one.

Private surveys have indicated that about 39 per cent of American households gardened in 1971. The USDA studies cover only from 1974 on.

The initial 1,500 interviews this year are to be followed this fall with a more extensive questionnaire. The interviews were conducted with "the main food shoppers" or those who had the major responsibility for food-purchasing decisions within their households.

So the data so far comes from the shopper who is not necessarily the gardener. USDA officials cautioned against drawing too many conclusions from these tentative findings.

In an article in the current "Vegetable Situation" publication of USDA's Outlook and Situation Board, Evelyn F. Kaitz and Jon P. Weimer of the study group point to a "slight but steady growth in home gardening over the past three years."

"This suggests that the interest in home fruit and vegetable gardening generated in the United States three or four years ago ... may be becoming firmly established and is not necessarily a transitory phenomenon," they wrote.

The popularity of home gardening was found highest in the north-central states and rural areas and among larger households. Mrs. Kaitz said the data does not yet indicate how much of the sample is composed of farm families that have a vegetable garden to supplement store-bought groceries, whatever their money-producing crop.

Indeed, the survey of shoppers listed economic motives second, at 40 per cent, among the reasons families turned to or continued gardening.

A preference for fresh fruits and vegetables was the first motive, with 50 per cent of those responding mentioning that reason.

Less than half the surveyed households froze some fruits and vegetables last year, whether they were home-grown or store bought, the article said.

Only 30 per cent said someone in the household canned or preserved the crops from the home garden, and only 14 per cent of those questioned gave canning as a reason for gardening.

Per capita income figures on the households are not yet completed, Mrs. Kaitz said. The straight family-income statistics showed that 55 per cent of those having gardens all three years had incomes above $10,000, and 41 per cent of those not gardening any of those years had annual earnings below $10,000.

She suggested that some poorer families are not gardening because they could be in urban apartments without access to a community plot, while the higher-income households could easily have eight or nine members.

The tomato was the most popular vegetable grown last year, showing up in 95 per cent of the gardens. More than 60 per cent of the gardens included beans, cucumbers and peppers, and more than half produced radishes, scallions, lettuce, onions, carrots and corn.

Less than a fourth of the respondents said they had fruit trees or planted such garden crops as melons and strawberries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has rejected a proposal to speed up the time it takes for a change in the market price for raw milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin to be reflected in the prices paid to milk producers.

H.L. Forest, an official of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said the evidence presented at a hearing in Clayton, Mo., in early June showed that the "advanced pricing" clause proposed for 34 federal milk-marketing-order regions should not be adopted.

"It would adversely affect manufacturing-milk values, reduce producer returns and create disorderly marketing conditions contrary to the intent of the federal marketing-order law," a USDA spokesman said.

It now takes about two months for a jump in Minnesota-Wisconsin prices to work its way through the milk-industry pricing system to the retail buyer's wallet. Those seeking the advanced pricing wanted to keep price changes later in the system closer to the so-called M-W series.

The complicated pricing formulas, undergirded by USDA price supports, are keyed to the markets in those two major milk-producing states.

The areas that would have been affected included most Midwest states bordering on the Mississippi River.

The milk orders set the minimum that milk dealers must pay dairy farmers for the raw product, based on their use of it en route to consumers.

The handlers know in advance what they have to pay for milk used for drinking but do not know until the fifth day of the month following a price change in the M-W series what they must pay farmers for milk that will be used in butter, cheese and other products.

INFORMAL POLL

BOSTON (AP) — Among 100,000 visitors to "The Revolution" exhibit here, 47 per cent have been classified in an informal survey as patriots on the colonists' side.

They were rated by a Honeywell computer according to their votes on four major Revolutionary issues — the Stamp Act, the Boston Massacre Trials, the Boston Tea Party and the Siege of Boston.

Loyalists among the visitors totaled 27 per cent. Another 26 per cent were undecided. It is estimated that in 1776 a slight majority of the colonists were patriots, with a sizable minority remaining loyal to the Crown.

TV's 'family hour' hearings are scheduled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Next Tuesday and Wednesday, a House communications subcommittee will hold hearings here on an item that has raised a few Hollywood hackles and a lawsuit — TV's "family hour" at night.

It should be interesting.

Scheduled witnesses include producer Norman Lear, a major family hour critic; National Gay Task Force folk; Gene "Star Trek" Roddenberry; comic Bill Cosby; and a local PTA group.

Also scheduled to speak, a subcommittee spokesman said, is a man from the Adult Film Association, a group whose X-rated wares aren't apt to be on TV during the family hour or any hour.

He's on the list because he wrote and asked to be heard, added the spokesman, Allan Pearce, an economist for the Federal Communications Commission before he joined the subcommittee.

All the witnesses were invited — but not subpoenaed — to appear, said Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., the subcommittee chairman. He said the hearings aren't intended to result in any proposed new laws.

It's only an "oversight" hearing into how the FCC is doing its job, said Van Deerlin, whose House group has jurisdiction over the agency.

The sessions will come during deliberations by a federal judge here in a suit filed last October by Lear, eight other situation comedy makers and three guilds representing actors, writers and directors.

The suit, against the networks, the National Association of Broadcasters and the FCC, asks that the NAB's undefined "family viewing" standard for early-evening entertainment shows be declared unlawful.

The FCC is involved because of talks its chairman, Richard E. Wiley, had with network and NAB officials about the "family hour" concept before it became part of the NAB's television code of standards.

Van Deerlin, who anticipates no court ruling during next week's hearings, said the fact that the family hour dispute is in court "doesn't obviate our responsibilities in the matter."

However, he said he won't be raising the issue of who "called the turn (on adoption of the family hour), or of who pressured whom."

Instead, he said, he'll concentrate on whether the family standard, in effect since September 1975, is an "intrusion" into the productivity and creativity of television's program-making corps in Hollywood.

There also may be discussions of violence on TV, he added.

Public hearing set on water, waste rules

JEFFERSON CITY— The Missouri Department of Natural Resources is holding a public hearing today at 2010 Missouri Blvd. on the organizational rules for the solid waste management and water supply programs in the Division of Environmental Quality.

The hearing is being held to receive public testimony on these proposed rules in order to meet the requirement on rule-making contained in Senate Bill 58. These organizational rules explain the programs' functions and operations, and how the public may obtain information.

The purpose of the solid waste management program is to insure the safe, adequate disposal of solid waste materials.

The water supply program's purpose is to insure safe drinking water for Missourians.

July unemployment rate is debated

NEW YORK (AP) — What are we to make of the utterly illogical report that the unemployment rate rose in July because the job market improved?

The question is perhaps a bit late in being posed, because it seems likely that a good many people have made up their minds, even perhaps about the Presidential election, as a result of those statistics.

About 400,000 people found jobs in July, bringing total employment to 87.9 million, the greatest figure ever recorded. But the jobless rate, a popular symbol of economic strength or weakness, rose to 7.8 per cent.

That rise, from 7.5 per cent, resulted almost entirely from te fact that a lot of potential workers previously had been erased from the records, expunged from the labor force. Statistically, they ceased to exist.

Why was this done? Because, explains the Bureau of Labor Statistics, these individuals withdrew themselves from the official labor force when, discouraged by their poor prospects, they failed to look for work just prior to its surveys.

Thus, the worst of the unemployed were statistically eliminated.

More than one million discouraged people were so classified at the time during the recent recession. They were there; they were unemployed; they weren't counted, on the jobless or the labor force rolls.

Now, with the economy recovering, these people once again see a possibility of obtaining jobs and so they are searching again, thus becoming part of the labor force. Understandably, despite better prospects they don't find work immediately, and so they also become unemployed.

The rise in the jobless rate, therefore, can be seen as arising largely from a statistical concept rather than a deterioration of the economy. But the latter will be the interpretation used by many people.

The paradox wasn't unforeseen. It was inevitable that when hopes were restored many of these people would again become active job-seekers. Some, at least, hadn't given up looking because they didn't want work; they wanted it but couldn't get it.

With 7.4 million Americans seeking and failing to find jobs, the situation is bad enough without statistical concepts entering the picture, first to make the jobless rate appear lower during the recession, and then to distort the trend in the recovery.

Professionals understand the inadequacies of any statistical measure, and they make proper allowances. Laymen often do not.

The monthly rate, which is a complex and limited — even arbitrary — measure of economic performance, incorrectly has come to be thought of as a magnificently simple indicator, even of individual job prospects.

That being so, it is also an ingredient of many decisions, including the millions of decisions soon to be made on who should be President of the United States for the next four years.

Then the absurdity is seen as a danger.

Things aren't what they seem especially in the business world

NEW YORK (AP) — Poets, parents, pedants and more have been telling us from the beginning of human time that things aren't always what they seem.

The wisdom often applies to the news of business, finance and economics, to which so often we apply the conventional explanations, realizing later that, applied too often, such explanations often become meaningless.

Little more need be said about the July jobless rate, which rose to 7.8 per cent from 7.5 per cent, leading to the conventional conclusion that here was more bad news for the economy.

Those who read a few more paragraphs realized the rise was a consequence not of a weakening economy but of one regaining strength. While unemployment rose 280,000, the number with jobs leaped 410,000.

The unemployment rate rose to 7.8 per cent because the labor force rose by 690,000, largely because individuals re-entered the job market as their prospects improved.

Another example is provided by the statistics on personal deposits in savings and loan institutions. In the first quarter of the year they totaled $18.9 billion, in the second only $11.8 billion.

Viewed casually, one would be inclined to conclude, among other things, that the ability or desire of Americans to save was less in the second quarter than in the first, and that the mortgage-lending ability of savings banks and associations was lessened.

That might be so, but before such a conclusion can be drawn we must await some indication of the size of the new checking accounts offered by these institutions. How much simply was transferred from savings to checking?

If this indeed did take place—if some of the money remained in the saving institutions but in checking rather than savings accounts—then the lending ability of the institutions wasn't reduced as much as we might think.

Another illustration: A report from the Census Bureau shows that jobs in city government rose last year at a lesser rate than before. The 2,506,000 municipal employes in October 1975 was a 0.6 per cent rise, smallest in 13 years.

Quite likely this small rise can be attributed in part to the financial conservatism that has developed among taxpayers, especially in view of the near bankrupcy of several larger, older municipalities.

New type mortgages cost more

Associated Press Write:

Traditional home mortgages with fixed monthly payments are giving way in scattered areas of the country to experimental plans designed to make it easier for would-be buyers to get loans. And the new types of mortgages usually wind up costing consumers more money.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that at the end of the first quarter of this year there was $456 billion in outstanding mortgage debt on one-to four-family, nonfarm residential properties. About half the debt was owed to savings and loan associations.

Most of the mortgages were written in traditional form. The average annual interest rate, as of June, was just under 9 per cent.

Richard Marcis of the board's Office of Economic Research said the use of nontraditional mortgage forms, including variable rate loans where the amount of interest is allowed to fluctuate, is still "relatively limited."

At the same time, he said, the variable rate loan has been adopted by 10 state-chartered savings and loan associations in California. These institutions have loaned $2 billion on variable rate mortgages in 16 months, he said. (Note: federally chartered savings and loan assocations are prohibited from offering variable rate mortgages; the situation at state-chartered institutions differs from state to state.)

Another alternative, called the graduated payment mortgage, has been proposed by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass. Under this plan, the rate of interest would remain constant, but the size of the monthly payment would fluctuate. It would be relatively low at the beginning — making things easier for young people just starting out — and would increase over the years as inflation and experience push up earning power.

David Strachan of the American Bankers Association said the interest rate on the traditional mortgage is based the cost of money to the bank now and over the life of the loan. With a variable rate mortgage, Strachan said, "the bank can operate a lot closer to the actual cost of money." Allowing the interest rate to fluctuate also makes mortgages competitive with other types of loans which usually have higher interest rates.

To attract the deposits which are a major source of mortgage money, a thrift institution such as a savings and loan association must pay an interest rate that is competitive with other investments. Bankers contend this is more difficult when the institution is locked into a long-term loan returning a fixed amount of money.

Oliver H. Jones, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers of America, said a variable rate mortgage gives the borrower "a slightly lower initial interest rate, but one that would vary, up or down, with the future cost of money to the lender."

Belle hits New York, starts losing strength

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York metropolitan area cleaned up and bailed out today from its first major hurricane in more than a decade as the storm, downgraded in strength, carried its heavy winds and heavy rains north through New England.

Flash flooding in the wake of Hurricane Belle, now a tropical storm, posed serious problems for Vermont and other parts of New England.

"There are just too many to list them. We're in real trouble," said Earl Osgood, operations director of Civil Defense for Vermont when he was asked about flooded roads and washed out bridges.

The impact of Belle, which made its first landfall on suburban Long Island early in the morning, was not so severe as had been expected in the metropolitan area. But it was bad enough to flood basements, snarl traffic and leave hundreds of thousands of people without electricity after fallen trees snapped power lines.

"God was with us," said Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso this morning.

Forecasters said the worst of the storm, which had packed winds of up to 110 miles an hour during its three-day journey up the Atlantic Coast, would be over by noon.

But the danger of flooding from heavy rains remained and flash flood watches were posted in parts of Connecticut, Massachusetts and northern New England. Five to eight inches of rain were expected in Connecticut; up to six inches was predicted for Vermont.

Osgood said almost all the towns from the Massachusetts line to Shrewsbury, Vt., about 12 miles south of Rutland, were threatened by severe flooding. The National Weather Service advised that the storm would intensify, not abate as expected, before moving northward out of the area.

At 6 a.m. the center of the storm was near Springfield, Mass.

"It's lost its punch," said Tony Gregory, a weather service forecaster in Boston. "It will weaken quite rapidly as it moves over the land, but it still has lots of rain left in it."

Only one fatality was directly attributed to the storm, the first major hurricane to hit New York since Donna killed 36 persons in 1960. A 19-year-old Long Island woman, out to see the storm, was hit by a falling tree.

During the morning, Belle moved north up the Connecticut River valley, already drenched by four days of rain associated with another weather system.

Accident roundup

13 hurt

Thirteen persons were injured, three seriously, in five area traffic accidents Monday, according to the highway patrol.

Two Williamsville youths received serious injuries in a motorcycle - car vehicle accident at 7 a.m., 12 miles north of Poplar Bluff on Highway 67.

The accident occurred when Mary Margaret Wade, 22, of Farmington lost control of a northbound car pulling a trailer while coming down a hill and the vehicle slid sideways into the oncoming lane and struck a soundbound motorcycle driven by Rickie Wayne Luke, 16,of Williamsville.

Luke and a passenger, Jackie Dean Wood, 16, of Williamsville Route One, received injuries and were taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff. Wood was later transferred to Jewish Hospital in St. Louis.

A Ste. Genevieve man suffered serious injuries and three persons received minor injuries in a two - vehicle accident at 8:25 a.m. Monday on Interstate 55 half a mile north of Cape Girardeau.

The accident occurred when a northbound pickup truck driven by Michael Allen Lynn, 23, of Cape Girardeau slowed to make a left turn onto the median when a northbound car driven by Chester Guy Perkins, 39, of Ste. Genevieve came over a small rise and hit the pickup from behind. The truck overturned onto its left side in the median.

Perkins suffered serious injuries and a passenger in his car, Christopher Longgrear, 21, of Ste. Genevieve, received minor injuries. Two passengers in the Lynn vehicle, Ronald Niswonger, 16, of Cape Girardeau and Cletius Keifer, 21, of Cape Girardeau, received minor injuries. All four were taken to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Giradeau.

Three persons received injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 9:30 a.m. Monday at the junction of Highway 60 and 77 near Wyatt.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Willie Mae Brown, 65, of Charleston failed to stop at a stop sign and struck an eastbound tractor-trailer truck driven by J. V. Hood, 55, of Memphis, Tenn., in the side.

Brown suffered moderate injuries and Hood and a passenger in Brown's car, Luther Brown, 67, of Charleston, received minor injuries. They were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

A Sikeston woman and her daughter received minor injuries in a two- vehicle accident at 7:35 a.m. Monday in the Tanner community, located at the junction of Route Z and ZZ in Scott County.

The accident occurred when a northbound car driven by Dale L. Hendrix, 33, of Bloomfield failed to stop at a stop sign and was struck in the left side by an eastbound car driven by Kathy M. Duncan, 23, of Sikeston.

The Duncan woman and her one- year - old daughter, Leigh Ann Duncan, received injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Two Fredericktown residents received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 3:50 p.m. Monday six miles northwest of Fredericktown on Route J.

The accident occurred when the driver of a westbound car, Beverly Sue Firbaugh, 20, of Fredericktown, pulled back into the right lane too quickly while passing a car driven by Harmon Layne, 59, of Fredericktown and the right rear wheel of the Firbaugh vehicle struck the front bumper of Layne's car, which was forced off the road.

Both drivers received injuries and were taken to Madison County Memorial Hospital in Fredericktown.

Moit charged with murder

BERTRAND — Manuel Allen Moit, 24, was arrested at the family home, here Monday in connection with the shooting death of James Edward "Jamie" Helmes, whose body was found in a drainage ditch near Diehlstadt Sunday.

Making the arrest were Trooper Jerry Crismon of the Highway Patrol, Mississippi County Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons and Scott County Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman.

Charged Monday night with first degree murder in the case, Moit is to be arraigned in Scott County Magistrate Court Wednesday, according to assistant Scott County prosecuting attorney, Steve Taylor.

Heckemeyer loses votes in canvass

Incumbent Circuit Court Judge Marshall Craig has apparently extended his narrow lead over challenger Tony Heckemeyer following the canvass of votes in Scott and Mississippi counties.

Heckemeyer lost 14 votes in the Scott County canvass. In Mississippi County, two sets of vote totals, each different, will be forwarded to the secretary of state's office in Jefferson City.

When votes were tabulated after last Tuesday's election, the unofficial count showed Craig ahead in Scott County, 5,136-4,919, and the overall winner in Scott and Mississippi counties by four votes, 7,334-7,330.

Scott County Clerk Bob Kielhofner said today that the canvass conducted Monday by Ollie Amick of Illmo, representing the Democratic Party; George T. Johnson of 403 Dorothy St., Sikeston, representing the Republican Party; and himself showed a 10 fewer votes for Heckemeyer in one precinct, five fewer in another precinct and one additional vote in a third precinct.

Kielhofner said the canvass showed no change for Craig and the amended total in Scott County now favors Craig, 5,136-4,905. He did not release the names of the precincts in which the vote count was changed.

Kielhofner also said the canvassers found a few changes in other races, such as a 32 fewer votes for Billy Joe Thompson and a 30 fewer for John Dennis, the two rivals for state senator of the 27th District, and a 30 additional votes for David Shy in his successful race for the Democratic nomination for prosecuting attorney in Scott County.

Kielhofner said the changes did not affect the unofficial winers of any of the races. He added that the certified tally books will be forwarded to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick today or Wednesday for an official announcement of winners in the primary election.

Mississippi County Clerk Arthur Lee Goodin said today that the official canvass Monday of the Aug. 3 election gave Craig two additional vortes in

Court appoints Kirkpatrick

BENTON — Oliver Kirkpatrick of Charleston Route One was appointed Monday to the Levee District No. 2 Commission by the Scott County Court.

The County Court had taken appointment of Kirkpatrick under advisement on July 7, along with a petition submitted July 1 seeking appointment of Joe Lee Michaels of Benton Route One to the commission

The vacancy on the Levee District No. 2 Commission resulted from the resignation in May of William Moore of Sikeston.

Rodeo festivities start Thursday with parade

Rodeo Week once again has come to Sikeston, with Jaycees and others dressed in western wear and excitement building in anticipation of the first rodeo performance Thursday night.

Official festivities for the 24th annual Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo are scheduled to begin at 5:30 p.m. Thursday with a street parade starting at Kingsway Plaza Mall. The first performance of the rodeo is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday.

Other perofrmances of the rodeo will begin at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday night and 2:30 p.m. for Sunday's concluding matinee performance.

The rodeo is approved by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, and will pay the cowboys about $15,000 in cash and prizes.

The feature entertainer for this year' event is Tanya Tucker, the 17- year - old singing sensation whose show has something for everyone in the audience.

There will also be a specialty clown act featuring Larry Clayman, one of the most respected and capable rodeo clowns in the PRCA circuits. Clayman's act also features a monkey, a dog and horses trained to give an entertaining show.

The stock for this year's rodeo again is being furnished by Tommy Steiner of Austin, Tex., one of the country's top stock contractors.

Ticket sales are running ahead of last year, according to Jaycee officials, and everyone planning to attend is encouraged to get tickets in advanced. The popular Saturday night performance is nearly sold out, the Jaycees said.

Tickets may be obtained by phoning the rodeo grounds ticket office, 471-7196, or by stopping by the office on North Ingram Street.

Stoddard votes are unchanged

BLOOMFIELD— Votes cast in the Stoddard County primary election Aug. 3 were canvassed Monday, County Clerk John Marvin Capps said today, and not a vote was changed in the countywide or state races.

He said a one-vote difference was found involving a write-in candidate for a committeeman position and one was found involving a proposal constitutional amendment but in neither case did it affect the outcome.

Several of the committeemen and committeewomen elected did not file the proper campaign disclosure forms and it was unclear whether or or not they could take office. Capps said today they could.

He said he had talked with the state election commission about the matter.

He explained that persons nominated to countywide offices are issued a certificate of nomination by his office and in the general election winners are issued a certificate of election, but his office does not issue a certificate of any kind to committeemen and committeewomen.

Thus his office cannot withhold anything from local committeemen elected when they do not comply with the law.

Persons elected who failed to comply with the law include, Fred Wethington and Lois E. Mooney, Democrats of Castor Township, and L. B. Black, Democrat of Pike Township.

Girl Scouts take Frontier Trails trip

Hungate bows out

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Treasurer James Spainhower says "others may come to the forefront" and make themselves available to the state Democratic Committee as possible candidates for the party's U.S. Senate nomination.

So far Spainhower is the only challenger of former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes for the nomination left vacant by the death last week of Congressman Jerry Litton.

The Chillicothe Democrat was winning a three-way primary race over Hearnes and U.S. Rep. James Symington, when he was killed with his family in a plane crash.

Fellow Congressman William Hungate took himself out of consideration Monday, saying it was a "difficult decision," but that he could "no longer ask my family to make any additional sacrifices."

Spainhower said the 9th District congressman's announcement was "unfortunate," but "I fully understand his reasons."

Other possible candidates might make themselves available to the committee, Spainhower said in a telephone interview during a pause in a Current River canoe trip near Van Buren.

Admitted to hospital

Judge falls from ladder

BLOOMFIELD— Jack Ward of Route One, judge of Stoddard County Court from the first district, was admitted to Veterans Hospital at Poplar Bluff for tests Monday morning following an accident last week.

Mrs. Ward said today that he is feeling alright, but that he has been dizzy since the accident and that he should be home in a few days.

The accident occurred Wednesday afternoon-the day after he was reelected to office in the county primary election, while he was helping his son remodel his home.

Ward was standing on a ladder, working on a carport, when he fell about 10 feet, hitting his head on the ground.

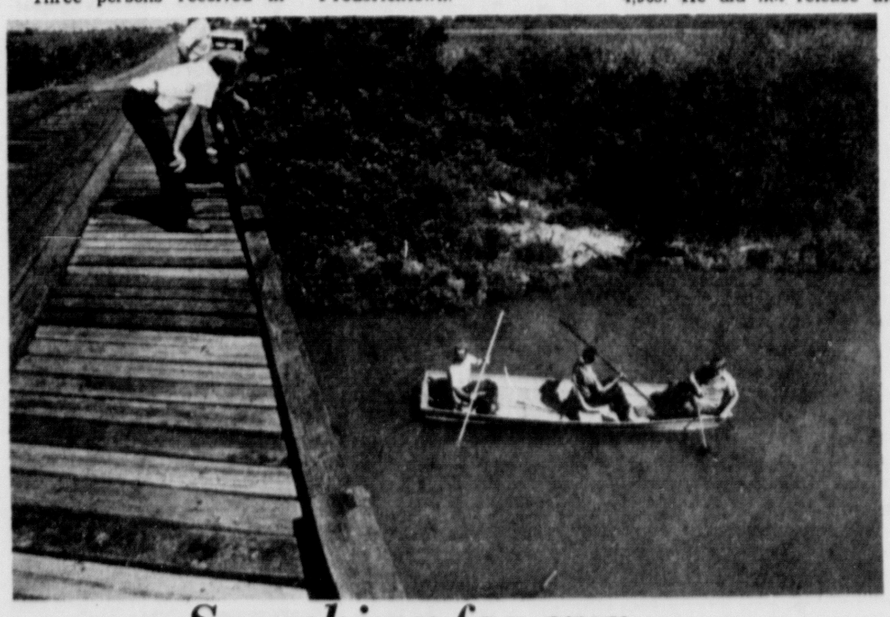

He was taken to the emergency room of Dexter Memorial Hospital but was sent home without treatment.

His wife finally convinced him to see his private doctor Saturday morning, who advised him to enter the hospital to undergo tests.

He was x-rayed Monday but nothing was found wrong.

Mrs. Ward said that apart from his dizziness, he is doing fine and that after his accident he continued to do some of his work.

However, he did not attend the County Court session on Thursday.

Searching for gun

Scott County Deputy Sheriff Gerald Inman, front, and Highway Patrol Trooper Jerry Crismon give instructions from the bridge, and members of the Sikeston Volunteer Fire Department search the shallow waters of Northcut Ditch, west of Diehlstadt, for the gun suspected of being used in the murder of James Edward "Jamie" Helmes Jr. of Sikeston. The gun was not found. Helmes' body was found about 200 yards down stream from the bridge Sunday by fishermen. (Daily Standard photo)

ANTHER DECLARATION

By Howard Flieger

The Economist of London is a serious- voiced weekly newsmagazine which relaxes now and then with a whimiscal parody that probably amuses more people on this side of the Atlantic than on the other.

Although it is weeks now since our anniversary, The Economist's 1976 reconstruction of the 1776 "Declaration of Independence" is an example. It says something about British- American relations that people tend to ignore — a shifting toward the U.S. of the balance between the two English- speaking democracies which, for 200 years, have had a love- hate relationship comfortably uncomfortable to both.

In their issue of July 3, 1976, the editors of The Economist wrote a "Declaration of Dependence" — their present- day adaptation of Thomas Jefferson's words of 1776 that brought England and America to the crux.

This is from The Economist's version:

"When, in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to forge Political Bands linking them with another, and to relinquish their sseparate and equal Station among the Powers of the Earth, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind requires that they should declare the Causes which impel them.

"We hold these Truths to be self- evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creastor with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Tax Loopholes; that to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed; that, whenever any Form of Governmentbecomes destructive of these Ends, it is the Right of the People to alter it...

"The recent History of the Rulers of Great- Britain is a History of repeated Injuries and Usurpations. to prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid World:

"They have erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent out Swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their Substance;

"They have repeatedly and cruelly increased the Price of stamps, thereby effectively levying a Stamp Tax;

"They have reduced the Value of the Pound to just about 1.776 Dollars, which is an excessively Bicentennial Figure;...

"In every stage of these Oppressions, we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble Terms; our repeated Petitions have been answered only be repeated Injury.

"Nor have we been wanting in Attentions to our American brethern. We have reminded them of the Circumstances of our Separation from them... We have appealed to their native justice and Magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the Ties of our common Kindred to forgive and forget the Past...

"We, therefore, the Representatives of Great- Britain, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good People of this Island, solemnly Publish and Declare, That this Island is, and of Right ought to be, the fifty- first State ... of the United States of America and Britain; and that as such it no longer has the Power to levy War, contract Alliances, and do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do.

"And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm Reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence and of the US Nuclear Deterrent, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, what is left of our Fortunes, and what is left of our sacred Honour."

Similar, though not identical, were the vexations that impelled Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and others to pen the American Declaration of Independence from the British Crown two centuries ago.

In doing so in 1776, they didn't have as much fun as The Economist did in 1976.

UNCLE SAM'S SILLY SAFETY RULES

"The safety commission's job is to do what it can to reduce risks at acceptable costs. It should get over the idea it can turn the complex modern world into one great padded cell where even an idiot can do himself no harm."

Thus did Business Week vent its frustration over silly safety proposals offered by the government's Consumer Product Safety Commission. In a May 3 editorial, the magazine detailed the Commission's proposed standards for paper matches, which would require that the match go out within 15 seconds and be enclosed in a childproof box.

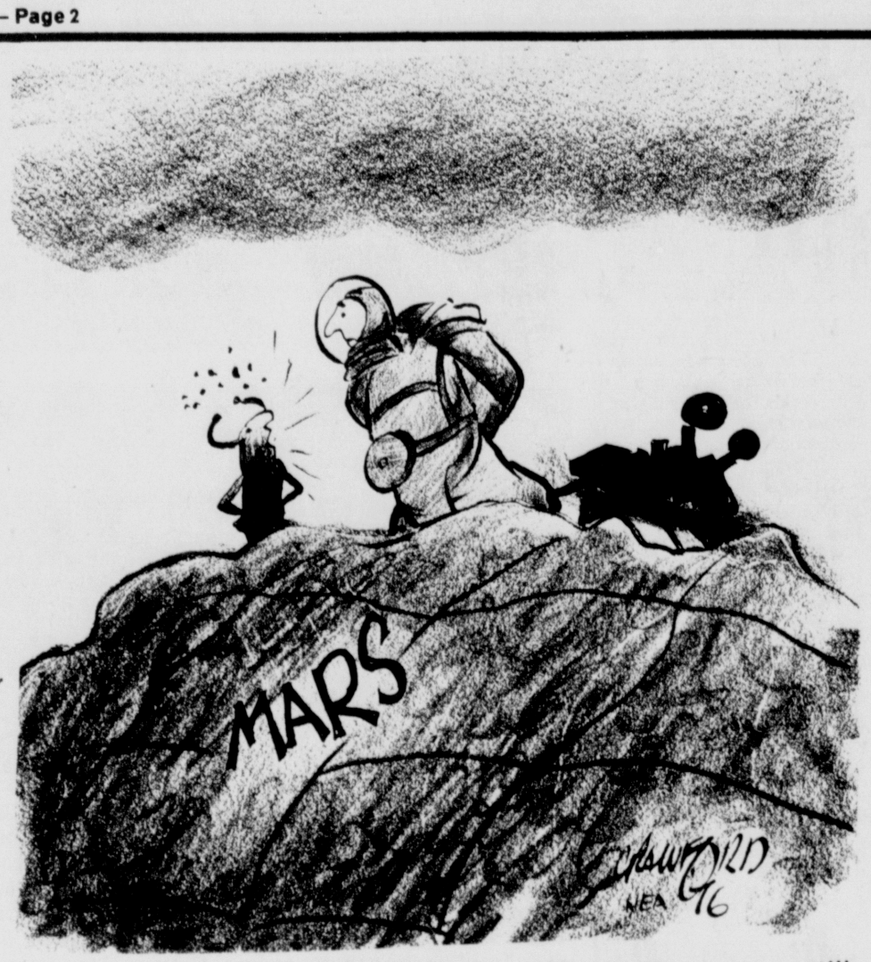

"A 15- second match is no good for lighting a pipe, changing a fuse, or finding the car keys you dropped in the dark in the parking lot," editorializes the periodical. "It is a degraded product that will add one more annoyance to the frustrations of modern living."

The match book issue is simply another in a rapidly growing list of proposals thought up by Washington's bureaucrats — goaded by consumer advocate groups — which are loaded with good intentions but awfully short on common sense. The safety commission points to the 10,000 match- related injuries a year in making its proposal. No one questions the desirability of cutting back on such injuries. But wouldn't it be more logical to educate individuals on the use of matches — and to keep them out of children's hands?

This particular controversy is reminiscent of the government's regulation, passed a couple of years ago for a mandatory seatbelt- buzzer system to be installed in new cars by all U.S. manufacturers. The irritating device unnerved so many Americans that there was a massive demand for the law to be stricken from the books — which indeed it was.

Perhaps the leading government villain in the promulgation of silly safety regulations is the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). One recent booklet published by OSHA for farmers, for example, warns them that — horror of horrors — manure is slippery.

Taken together, such bureaucratic nonsense brings back this time- honored thought by Will Rogers: "I don't make jokes. I just watch the government and report the facts."

"Whaddya mean — am I pledged to Ford, Reagan or still uncommitted?"

CENSORSHIP FOE

The death of Morris L. Ernst at the age of 87 in New York serves to recall his outstanding legal championship of freedom of speech and press, but particularly the case of James Joyce's novel "Ulysses." That major work was published in Paris in 1922 but could only be smuggled into the United States because of statutes against obscenity. In 1933, however, Mr. Ernst won a historic opinion from Federal District Judge John M. Woolsey in New York that "Ulysses" was a work of literary merit. Few today would disagree with that, but the historic point of the ruling was that the book had to be considered in its entirety, not in respect to a few words or passages. The opinion that Morris Ernst won has long since become the law of the land and a defense of literature against narrow censorship.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

THE PRISON POPULATION BOOM

From The Horizon
Missouri Division Of Corrections

Partly because of the post-World War II increase in population and a renewed emphasis on punishment, there are more men and women in state and federal prisons today than at any other time in the nation's history. As of Jan. 1 there were approximately a quarter of a million inmates in prisons around the country, 10 per cent more than a year earlier. More than half the prisoners were under 30 years old.

Prison populations declined in the 1960s, despite a rapid growth in the crime rate, as work release, early parole and other rehabilitative programs gained in popularity. The low was reached in late 1968 when 188,000 persons were in prisons. High unemployment and the shift of philosophy in favor of punishment explain some of the prison population increase, but the primary cause is the so-called post-World War II "baby boom," according to the April ussue of Corrections Magazine.

More than half the nation's prison population is between the ages of 17 and 29, according to the publication.

Noting that 23 per cent of the nation's population was in that age group, it said that the nation could expect growing prison populations "at least until 1895." Only California showed a decline in its prison population. State officials attributed the 20 per cent decrease to new parole guidelines. But California still led all states with an inmate population of 20,007. Wyoming, with only 384 persons in state prison, had, at 73 per cent, the highest percentage increase since 1974. But among larger states (in terms of prison populations), South Carolina and Florida were tied for the highest rise at 38 per cent.

During this same period of time, Missouri's prison population rose over 11 per cent, which was the average percentage increase for the nations' prison systems. However, Missouri's prison population has grown substantially since the first of the year and the inmate population now totals over 4600, with the desired capacity being 3890.

THREE MORE teenage boys have been sent to a state correctional institution for extortion or strongarm robbery from schoolmates. The Juvenile Court action raises to five the number of convictions on similar charges within two weeks.

"I think the word may as well go out in the community that this court is not going to treat this matter lightly," said Juvenile Court Referee Judge Alan E. Highers after one of the convictions.

Well said. The young extortionists have used fear of violence with their victims. Let them now know the fear of confinement to curtail their cheap crimes.

EYES ON BONDSMEN

MOST PEOPLE WHO need bail bondsmen don't read lawbooks. So if they don't know there is a new Tennessee law prohibiting a charge of more than 10 per cent of the bond figure that's understandable.

But it's certainly right to expect the bond companies to know the laws under which they operate.

The bail firm that was hauled before Criminal Court Judge William H. Williams claimed it hadn't heard about the state law. It has now.

For this first time there was no punishment.

But let the companies not forget Judge Williams' parting remark: "There are critical eyes on bail bondsmen."

Broader reforms than the limitation on the fee were sought and rejected in the last Tennessee legislature. The kind of over-charging that led to this case suggests the legislature still has work to do.

YANKEE INGENUITY AT WORK

Yankee ingenuity has been the invisible force behind many of man's accomplishments over the years, such as the invention of mass production which revolutionized the industrial world. And now Yankee ingenuity has invaded yet another field: sports. At many U.S. bowling centers, trading stamps have been instituted as a promotional device to capture the interest and patronage of sports enthusiasts.

Bowling centers in approximately 40 states have programs offering trading stamps as tournament prizes, incentives for organizing leagues or learn-to-bowl classes and as bonuses for purchases in the pro shops. The concept originated eight years ago on the West Coast and has subsequently swept the country. According to The National Bowlers Journal of Chicago, Illinois, the widespread use of trading stamps offers "...all sorts of opportunities for the philatelist-bowler to indulge in his two favorite pastimes." Those proprietors who "...wonder how much the stamps eat into their profits are pleasantly surprised to discover the answer is 'zero.'"

At a time of economic uncertainty and shortages, the continued success of a basic institution like trading stamps, as a form of promotion, speaks well for the resiliency of U.S.-style free enterprise. Despite inevitable business pressures and temporary slumps, the trading stamp industry has remained very much alive and is now striking out in new directions, as exemplified by its unique bowling center arrangement. It proves that with Yankee ingenuity on our side, even those persistent prophets of doom do not have a chance.

THOSE MISERABLE TAX COLLECTORS

To find happiness in their work, tax collectors, particularly federal tax collectors since they take the biggest bite out of everyone's income, must surely have a solid streak of sadism at least 8-inches wide right up the middle of their backs. Why, did you know those ornery tax collectors even take the joy out of life for the inveterate gambler who makes a big win after perhaps a lifetime of losing?

A tax newsletter points out that if you play the horses and win over $600 at the racetrack of your choice, an Internal Revenue Service man will probably be there to insist that you declare the winnings immediately. Further, it seems that if you win a large amount like $20,000 you will be able to deduct the losses you suffered on bum horses or bad cards only if you have kept an accurate record of them that will stand up in court. How many people who cash in on a long shot are likely to have maintained a meticulous record of all their failures? Let's face it, the tax collector is likely to be the real winner if you strike it lucky. If you can't beat 'em join 'em--become a tax collector.

SEARCHING FOR BETTER WAYS

Much of our petroleum consumption goes into transportation in the form of gasoline and diesel fuel to run tens of millions of automobiles and trucks. There is no immediate substitute for the internal combustion engine for long haul work. But, nevertheless, electric vehicles with short haul driving ranges of 35 or 40 miles may, to an increasing degree, offer at least a partial solution to gasoline shortages and air pollution problems in metropolitan centers, cities and towns across the United States. There might even be an electric-powered second car in your future.

One of the nation's major electric companies reports that it is using two new electric-run test vans for routine work assignments in its service area. The vans have a top speed of 55 miles per hour and a range of 40 miles when driven at 30 miles per hour. Indications are that they will perform well for light delivery work over short distances. Electric vehicles have another advantage that would work to everyone's benefit. As the company points out, all utilities pay "...round-the-clock expenses on multi-million dollar generating plants which during nighttime hours are used relatively little." The batteries that power electric vehicles could be recharged at night, providing a load for generating equipment that would otherwise be spinning uselessly. By leveling out demand, or in industry jargon, "balancing the load,' electric companies would realize operating economies that would help hold down the cost of electricity per kilowatt-hour to all of its customers.

The electric industry is one of the nation's outstanding leaders, not only in seeking ways to provide the energy that people need, but also in developing new approaches to using more efficiently the energy the U.S. possesses. Experimenting with the use of electric-powered vehicles is just one of hundreds of approaches being explored for the ultimate purpose of helping to assure that energy starvation never becomes part of America's future.

FIRING UP THE SOUTH ON SYNTHETICS

From The Birmingham (Ala.) News

If the U.S. is to solve its problem of meeting the national demand for energy at a cost the nation can afford, coal will have to play a major role because coal is our most abundant fossil fuel.

Coal in its natural state presents problems as a widespread source of energy. Many of those problems can be solved by the conversion of coal, with its ash and smoke, into relatively clean and efficient synthetic gas.

A group of imaginative local businesses, backed by both state and federal authorities, are now embarking on a bold venture to build the first coal-gasification plant in the South. If this venture is successful, it could make an immense contribution toward heating the homes and firing the furnaces of this area for many years to come.

At this stage, the venture requires approval of Dr. Robert Seamans, director of the federal Energy Research and Development Administration. If Mr. Seamans decides the government will support the construction of the plant, production would be possible in six years.

The Energy Research and Development Administration is destined to make a major contribution to the initiatives the future demands in making new energy sources possible. It is to be hoped that Mr. Seamans will give this undertaking the chance to prove successful. Coal gasification will be a reality sooner or later. Why not now?

Visiting a friend who had just retired to a luxurious condominium overlooking the rolling surf of Miami Beach, I couldn't help commenting on the sensuous ocean sounds that were drifting into the room. My friend smiled, and pushed a button alongside his armchair. Instantly, the room became quiet.

"We're too high up to hear much of anything," was his answer to my astonished expression. "What you've been hearing is a phonograph record. We play it almost all the time. If we leave the windows open, the room gets too hot and the salt air rots the carpet."

He pushed another button, and the sound of the surf again seemed to be drifting through that big, sealed picture window, as the sun glistened on the waves.

YOU ARE WHAT YOU WEAR

WASHINGTON — There is something going on in the clothing industry of which you may or may not be aware. Designers and manufacturers are now putting labels on the outside of their clothes instead of on the inside. It started a few years ago when Pierre Cardin, Courreges, Christian Dior, Gucci and others discovered that since women had paid so much for their outfits, they wanted everyone to know where they bought them.

The practice soon spread like wildfire and the saying "You are what you eat" has been replaced by "You are what you wear."

I was at a party the other evening and I noticed a lady with a large "CD" on the back ofher fur coat.

"What a beautiful Christian Dior coat," I aaid.

"How did you know it was a Dior?" she said in amazement.

"I just guessed from the cut of it," I replied. I helped her off with the coat and she gave me her silk scarf. It had "Givenchy" printed all over it.

"What a beautiful Givenchy scarf," I said.

"Oh, is that what it is? I just grabbed one out of a drawer."

"I'd know a Givenchy scarf anywhere. Say, is that a Pucci blouse you have on?"

"Yes, it is. How did you know?"

"It says 'Pucci' on the collar, the sleeves and the cuffs."

"You are observant. You're the first person who ever guessed this blouse came from Pucci."

I blushed modestly and then said, "It goes beautifully with your Diane von Furstenberg skirt."

"Don't tell me your wife has one just like it."

"No, she doesn't. I just noticed the 'DVF' embroidered along the entire hem -- on the outside."

She looked down. "Why, of course. I never noticed that before."

"Would you be insulted if I told you I've never seen anyone look better in Pierre Cardin black silk stockings?"

"Now how on earth did you know they were Cardin stockings?"

I was looking at your Guggi shoes with the big 'G' on each toe and my eye naturally traveled up to the 'C' which is stitched every inch along the seams of your stockings."

"You are the wicked one," she laughed.

"The Courreges leather belt is smashing with your Hermes handbag," I said.

"You have very good eyes," she said.

"I once read a Calvin Klein logo on a woman's sweater 200 feet away," I bragged.

"You're putting me on."

"I am not. This may come as a surprise to you, but I know you're wearing an Oleg Cassini slip."

Her eyes widened in surprise. "How do you know that?"

"I can read his name on the lace through your Pucci blouse."

"You devil you," she parried.

"Don't be embarrassed," I said. "I have Sears Roebuck stamped all over my boxer shorts."

"Well," she said, "I guess there is nothing you don't know about me."

"Yes, there is," I said. "I don't know your name. What is it?"

She gasped, "It's--it's, oh my God, I forgot my own name."

Plumbers Uncover Leaks

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- Ex-President Richard Nixon's infamous plumbers, so named because of their efforts to plug White House news leaks, wound up their nefarious works with an investigation of congressional leaks.

Their purpose was to embarrass Nixon's detractors by portraying them as security risks. Instead, the plumbers found Washington so porous that they couldn't sort out all of the leaks. It was "difficult to prove," reported one of their investigators, that any given "leak came from the Hill."

The plumbers' secret findings have a special significance today in light of all the excitement on Capitol Hill over leaks. The House Ethics Committee, suddenly more concerned about leaks than ethics, has invested $150,000 to find out who leaked a House report to CBS newsman Dan Schorr.

Earlier, the committee stopped short of condemning Rep. Michael Harrington, D-Mass., for an alleged leak. And now the Justice Department is investigating Rep. Robert Leggett, D.-Calif., for allegedly leaking classified information to the South Koreans.

All this has got investigators chasing in dizzying circles. For Washington is a Yellowstone of leaks, bubbling here, spouting there, spraying out suppressed information.

The White House plumbers discovered three years ago that government information channels would spring leaks faster than anyone could plug them. The plumbers started out to investigate the leaks on Capitol Hill. Chief plumber David Young sought the help of the Pentagon. He contacted Fred Buzhardt, then the Defense Department's general counsel, who assigned Pentagon investigator W. Donald Stewart to ferret out the security risks in Congress.

Stewart reported back on Feb. 13, 1973, that Capitol Hill was a sieve but that many of the leaks originated in the downtown government agencies, including the Pentagon and the White House.

On the Hill, he found classified documents stored in ordinary cabinets, transmitted without the regulation double envelopes and scattered around offices for any visitor to see.

The Secretary of Defense hasn't given adequate instructions, Stewart suggested, "detailing what can be given or cannot be given to members of Congress or the procedures for transmitting classified documents."

No central index was kept at the Pentagon, he added, to show what classified information had been distributed to congressional offices. As a result, the military brass had no idea what classified data was loose on the Hill.

Stewart found that government agencies often shower congressmen with classified information they don't want. "Many situations arise," he reported, "where members of Congress desire to 'dump' unwanted classified material on military liaison officers on Capitol Hill."

In a lengthy memo, Stewart cited a number of lax security practices in Senate offices. But invariably, he found that leaks had their beginning in the State Department, Defense Department or White House.

For example, he investigated a New York Times leak on July 23, 1971, about the arms limitations talks. He reported that the New York Times correspondent, William Beecher, had been referred by a State Department source to the office of Senator Henry Jackson, D-Wash.

The FBI, joining in the probe, spoke to two of the senator's employees. They admitted discussing the subject with Beecher but denied revealing the classified details.

Observed Stewart: "Circumstantial evidence would tend to point the finger at Sen. Jackson, as we had learned that a State Department briefing was held in his office on subject matter with him prior to the publication." But there was no proof.

Stewart also suspected that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had leaked information to reporters about U.S. bases in Spain. But before he could question the suspects, he was headed off by William Macomber, then an Assistant Secretary of State.

According to Stewart's memo, Macomber declared emphatically that then-Foreign Relations Chairman William Fulbright, D-Ark., "would not look favorably on such interviews." The investigation was halted in its tracks.

Stewart also failed to establish that his leading subject, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., leaked stories to the press about the spiraling costs of producing the Air Force C-5A transport plane.

But Stewart learned that the information came from some confidential charts that had been slipped to Proxmire by a person identified only as "hostile toward the Air Force."

Of course, the government uses the classification system to censor embarrassing news, which officials don't want the people to read. The government has the authority to classify embarrassing facts, the ability to shut off channels of information and the power to intimidate sources who could tell the truth.

All these are on the side of the government. Often leaks are necessary to expose corruption and wrongdoing, waste and inefficiency, mismanagement and miscalculations.

Footnote: Spokesmen for Sens. Jackson and Proxmire and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee denied any knowledge of improper leaks.

Clothing, textiles group develops program efforts

The Area Clothing and Textiles Advisory Committee met Thursday at the Sikeston Security Federal Savings and Loan Assn. building.

The committee is composed of representatives of various homemaker groups and program areas in Scott, Mississippi, and Stoddard counties. Those present for the meeting from Scott County were: Mrs. Dorothy James of Sikeston; Mrs. Paul Dugger of Blodgett; Mrs. Carl Clayton of Sikeston; and Mrs. Charles Grojean of New Hamburg. Present from Mississippi County were Mrs. Johnnie Mae Davis of Charleston; Mrs. Surcie Armstrong of Wyatt; and Mrs. Marshall Stone of Charleston. From Stoddard County were Mrs. Stan Lumsden of Bloomfield; Mrs. Rita Bader of Dexter; and Mrs. Brenda Garner of Bloomfield.

The group spent some time discussing various program needs and techniques for reaching different audiences and groups. Following this discussion they recommended that program efforts focus on several different topics which included: personal appearance and self- improvement, fitting and construction techniques, the selection, care and use of sewing equipment, clothing care and laundry aids, consumer information legislative issues and new developments in textiles and clothing.

It was the consensus of the group that special interest meetings should be continued, that the 1976-77 program should include workshops for teaching skills, mass media such as newpapers and radio be utilized to provide information for homemakers, area summer programs in addition to 4-H and Sew With Cotton be provided for youth groups, and that educational clothing and textiles tours be included if possible in the program.

Ann Landers

Mistress or wife- who should come to dinner?

Dear Ann: Please help me settle an argument with my husband. We have agreed to abide by your decision.

Henry and I are planning a lovely dinner party in our new home. One of his married business associates has a cutie-pie on the side. I say we should invite Mr. Business Associate and his WIFE, not the girlfriend. My husband says Mr. B.A. should be able to bring whoever he chooses -- and he has already said he wants to bring the cutie-pie.

According to my husband, what this man does with his personal life is none of our business. I agree with my husband but it would offend me to have a married man bring his mistress into our home. We will be issuing the invitations by phone soon, so hurry your answer. Who is right? -- Battle Royal In The Bahamas

Dear Royal Battlers: You are -- and don't let the so-and-so grind you down.

What Mr. B. A. does IS none of your business, but to offer hospitality to a married man and his cutie-pie cuts you in on the monkeyshines and gives your unspoken approval to the affair. Steer clear.

Dear Ann Landers: You slay me. Your upper-middle-class upbringing pops up in your column so often it's a hoot. Like again today -- when you advised the woman whose husband takes his 28½ inches of their standard 57-inch bed out of the middle. (They used to sleep cuddled up but now he accuses her of "leaning" on him.)

"Get twin beds," you advised. "But after 20 years the transition should be engineered with imagination and tact." Excellent counsel. But then you come up with the suggestion that the wife buy her husband a whistle to place on his bedside table and have it engraved with the message, "If you want me, just whistle."

What percentage of your readers can afford to engrave messages on ANYTHING these days? Do you know how much engraving costs per letter? It's time YOU woke up and smelled the coffee. -- Daily Reader In Yuma

Dear Daily: Mea culpa, lovey. Right you are. For those who can't afford engraving, write the message on a piece of paper and tape it to the whistle. It doesn't have to come from Tiffany.

Dear Ann: I am a female, 29 years old, but I really look 19. I'm single, never been married, come from a wonderful family, and was brought up in a very loving atmosphere, with kind and understanding parents and five wonderful brothers and sisters.

Last October, I met the first person in my life who made me feel really alive. We started with the usual conversation. When he asked my age, I lopped off eight years and said "21," because I figured he was about 24.

We began going out a lot. After three weeks he confessed he was only 19. I couldn't believe it. When he said, "Age means nothing," I confessed I was 29.

We continued dating and I assumed everything was fine because he never mentioned my age again. Eight months have passed and I really love this guy. I'm sure he feels the same about me. Last night I asked him when he wanted to get married. He said he could never marry me because of the age difference. I was stunned. What should I do? -- Plus Ten

Dear Plus: Tell him goodbye. If he really loves you he'll be back. If he doesn't, better to find out now.

Bluff hurler pitches one-hitter

Little League tournament opens

A one-hitter by Gowen of Poplar Bluff in the final game of thhe 11-12 year-old division was the highlight of opening night action in the Sikeston Invitational Little League Tournament Monday night at the Sikeston Recreational Complex.

New Madrid, Sikeston's All-Stars and Poplar Bluff all claimed opening-round victories in the 11-12 year-old tournament, while he Sikeston All-Stars and Dexter were the victors in the 9-10 year-old bracket.

Gowen allowed only one baserunner in the game--a two-out single in the third to Chambers--as Poplar Bluff blanked Charleston 11-0 in four innings. Gowen struck out four batters in the game and walked none as he narrowly missed throwing a perfect game. His teammates, meanwhile, scored three in the second, six in the third and two more in the fourth to win it by the ten-run rule. Spencer had two of Poplar Bluff's five hits off Kent, the Charleston loser.

In the first game of the evening, Bloomfield jumped out to a 6-0 first-inning lead, but New Madrid came back with two in the third and seven in the fourth and went on to win 12-7. A home run by Sallenger was the big blow during the fourth-inning uprising by New Madrid, who also scored three times in the fifth to wrap it up. Cox emerged as the winning pitcher, settling down after the shaky first inning.

The Sikeston All-Stars also advanced in the 11-12 year-old division, fipping Bertrand 18-2. The All-Stars scored four times in the first and four more in the second before a ten-run explosion in the thrid put the game away. Bertrand scored both of their runs in the second off winner Bert Perry. Perry had two hits for Sikeston, along with Steve Green and Mark Statler.

In the 9-10 year-old division, Dexter scored nine runs in the top of the sixth to overcome a 17-13 lead and take a 22-18 victory over Bloomfield. Carrigan had a perfect five-for-five night at the plate for Dexter, including a double and a triple. Teammate McBride added four hits as Dexter outslugged Bloomfield in the hit department 20-16. Holtzhouser and Acorn had three hits apiece for Bloomfield.

The Sikeston All-Stars hit New Hamburg with six-run innings in both the third and the fifth as they won a 17-7 decision in the second game. New Hamburg led briefly 6-5 after scoring four in the top of the third, but Sikeston pounced back to put the game away with a half-dozen tallies in the bottom of the inning. Only two of the fourteen Sikeston players seeing action failed to hit safely, and seven players had two hits each.

Opening-round play continues tonight at the complex. At 6:30, Paducah takes on Charleston in the 9-10 year-old division, with the Sikeston Aces following against New Madrid at 8:00. In the 11-12 year-old tournament, Scott City meets the Dexter Americans at 5:30, Paducah takes on Chaffee at 7:15 and the Sikeston Aces play New Hamburg at 9:00.

Grid Cardinals arrive in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League arrived in Japan today to play the San Diego Chargers in the first American professional football game ever played in this country.

The exhibition game will be played at the 50,000-seat Korakuen baseball stadium on the night of Aug. 16.

It will be part of the Japanese observance of the U.S. bicentennial celebrations.

The Cardinals' 130-member delegation includes 60 players, cheer leaders and fans.

The Chargers are scheduled to fly in Thursday.

Saints win playoff opener 4-3

It was ten minutes until game time and the Sikeston Saints didn't have a starting pitcher yet, a situation not too uncommon in the somethimes disorganized world of Bi-State baseball. Then, the ball was handed to Jeff Jackson, a pitcher that hadn't started in a month. With Mike Otten, a secondline pitcher for the visiting Anna team, doing the work for the visitors against the rusty Jackson, a high scoring game was anticipated. The two starters and Sikeston reliever Mitch Walker had different ideas.

Otten hurled a good game for Anna despite taking the loss. And, considering the conditions, Jackson and Walker were outstanding. The 6-foot-3 TRCC product held Anna scoreless for five frames before tiring in the sixth. Then, like a page out of a Frank Merriwell story, Walker rushed to the park from work and set the visitors down without a hit, or run, through the last three-plus innings.

"Both those guys did a great job," said manager Tom Masterson after the 4-3 win.

Rightfielder Stan Hall again swung the clutch bat for the Saints in the come-from-behind win. It was Hall's third hit of the game, a two-out run scoring single in the eighth, that broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Saints a win in the first game of their best of three series against the Illinois squad.

Hall and Grant Dambach had the only extra base hits -- both doubles. It was Dambach who scored the winning run after walking and advancing to second on Bill Schatzley's sacrifice bunt.

"I knew Grant would get on somehow," said a Saints player after the game, in tribute to the shortstop's ability. He did, and two outs late he was knocked in by one of the team's most consistent late-inning performers.

Sikeston takes two days off. Then the team will host Anna again this Thursday night in an 8 p.m. game. A win would clinch the series and put Sikeston in the championship finals against the Cape-Perryville winner.

Cedeno hits for cycle as Astros destroy Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Cesar Cedeno, having already connected once for the cycle in his major league career, found a repeat performance more simple.

"The last time it happened I hit a home run, double and a single," the Houston Astros' center fielder recalled Monday night.

"The last time up I had to hit a triple," he added. "This time it was easier. I was kind of pressing, though. I knew I needed a single."

A one-base Cedeno hit, climaxing his memorable night, came in the eighth inning of a 13-4 Astros runaway facilitated by four St. Louis Cardinal errors.

But until his fusillade was triggered by a first-inning triple off Bob Forsch, 5-7, the wing-footed Cedeno had been struggling to collect any hit at all.

"I didn't get mad. I didn't panic," said Cedeno, who in seven previous games during a losing Houston trip had batted 4-for-28 as his average dipped to .287.

"Everybody that plays this game goes through what I did in San Diego," he added in further reference to his 1-for-22 performance immediately ahead of Monday night.

"It's part of the game. If you don't panic, you'll come out of it," he asserted. "It just takes hard work. The last day I felt like I was swinging a little better."

Cedeno, whose toil included a marathon batting practice session three days earlier, began reaping dividends in rapid fashion.

Forsch jammed the Houston hitter with a fast ball in the leadoff inning but watched helplessly as the delivery was blooped into the right field bullpen area for a triple.

The Cards pitcher won out in the next confrontation, retiring Cedeno on a foul, but was raked for his opponent's 16th home run of the season in the fourth.

Then in the seventh, with the clubs tied 2-2, Cedeno's most damaging blow was struck in the form of a two-out double which scored three runs following two singles and a St. Louis error.

SFSL race is up for grabs

Does anybody want to win first place in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball Leauge?

That seems to be THE question as the league race winds down to a close this week and next. Steward Steel held a game - and- a - half lead appeared to be ready to make a little breathing room between themselves and the pack, but no more. Steward suffered 8-1 setback Monday night at the hands of lightly- regarded Security National Bank and saw their lead dwindle to a full game. Fourth-place Bank of Sikeston dumped the 76-ers 8-1 in the other game of the evening.

Don Taylor, who had two triples and a single on the evening for Security National, ripped one of his three- baggers with the bases loaded in the fourth to drive in three of the six runs that inning. The winners also scored one in the sixth and one in the seventh in support of winning pitcher Jim Hill, who allowed only a first- inning tally. Vernie Dean got the loss.

The Bank of Sikeston scored three in the first and three in the second as they went on to down Steward Steel 8-1. Dave Mulcahy outpitched Tom Stinnett to get the victory. Ken Scheeter was two- for - three at the plate for the winners.

Steward Steel now has a 14-6 record, while Marks Food Mart stands at 13-7 and a game behind. Tied in the loss column and also a game out is the Eagles, who are 12-6. Bank of Sikeston is now 12-8 and are two games out. Marks and Steward square off tonight in a crucial game for both teams at 9:30. The Eagles play Eby's Distributing in the other game.

No-hitter vs. Dodgers sweet for 'Candy Man'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — It was "Candy Night" at Three Rivers Stadium and Pittsburgh Pirate left-hander John Candelaria gave everyone a treat.

The first 10,000 fans entering the stadium Monday night received a free candy bar in honor of the occasion and Candelaria followed that up by pitching a 2-0, no-hitter over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I've been dreaming about this since I was five years old," said the 22-year-old pitcher known as "The Candy Man" to Pirate fans. "I don't know if I'll come down. It's going to take a while to realize what's happened."

Only in his second major league season, Candelaria, 11-4, became the first Pirate pitcher to throw a no-hitter in Pittsburgh since Nick Maddox accomplished the feat at old Exposition Park in 1907.

He extended Los Angeles' losing streak to six games as he walked one batter and struck out seven. With the exception of the third inning, Candelaria retired the Dodgers in order.

A walk to Steve Yeager and two Pirate errors loaded the bases before Candelaria got Bill Russell to ground out to end the inning.

In the first inning, Al Oliver made a running grab of Davy Lopes' fly ball and Dave Parker made a shoestring catch of Ted Sizemore's sinking liner to snuff out possible hits.

Frank Taveras caught a line drive off Sizemore's bat in the sixth and Oliver ranged far to his left to make a running catch of Ron Cey's fly ball an inning later.

The last out in the ninth was also the last threat to the nohitter. Russell blooped a fly to center that Oliver gloved after nearly colliding with Taveras at shortstop.

"I looked out and thought, 'That's a heck of a way to lose it,' " Candelaria said.

When Oliver made the catch, Candelaria jumped into the air and the celebration began.

His teammates made a path of white towels extending from the clubhouse door to Candeparia's locker and added a few candy bars along the way to keep up the spirit of "Candy Night."

Candelaria sat down, opened a can of beer and promised it wouldn't be his last.

"I'm gonna drink beer all night," he said with a broad grin. "I don't think anyone can blame me."

In other National League games, the Houston Astros routed the St. Louis Cardinals 13-4 and the Montreal Expos nipped the San Francisco Giants 2-1. In the American League, the Kansas City Royals beat the New York Yankees 8-2; the Texas Rangers crushed the Detroit Tigers 8-1 and the Cleveland Indians turned back the Chicago White Sox 4-2.

Royals flex their muscles vs. Yanks

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have had their way with the New York Yankees this season, but Billy Martin says it could be a different story when the American League playoffs roll around.

"There'll be a little different type of adrenalin going in the playoffs," said Martin, the Yankees manager. "Maybe our luck will change.

"So far we haven't had any luck. None whatsoever. Maybe it's better that they have the luck now."

Martin's remarks came after the Royals battered New York hurlers for 12 hits in handing the Yankees their fourth straight setback, 8-2, in a nationally televised contest Monday night.

It was the seventh Kansas City victory over the Yankees in 10 games this season, but neither Martin nor Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog were too excited.

"If it goes right down to it, the team that has the best pitching will win," said Martin. "I think we have an edge there."

Kansas City took a league-leading 3.16 earned run average into the game, while the Yankees stood at 3.18, despite a recent streak in which they have lost 11 of 15 contests.

But Martin said the Yankees had the Royals outnumbered when it came to clutch, "money" pitchers.

"Catfish (Hunter), (Ken) Holtzman both fit that category, and so does (Ed) Figueroa," he said. "I don't think they can match us with three pitchers like that, not with (Steve) Busby out."

Herzog, whose squad boosted its advantage in the American League West to 10½ games, has been playing down his team's playoff chances, but he did allow himself a cautious reference.

"If we're both fortunate enough to get in the playoffs, it will be nothing to nothing when we start," he said. "In all the games we've played, we're 7-3 against them, but this was the first game that wasn't a barnburner."

BLOOMFIELD — A total of $30,000 in damages was awarded to Kyle Borders and his mother, Sandra Borders, by Judge Flake Haney last week in a Stoddard County Circuit Court civil suit agains Malden Wholesale foods inc.

Borders and his mother claimed in their petition that on Oct. 6, 1975, a truck operated by C. Jerome Wilburn, an employe of Malden Wholesale Foods Inc., collided with a school bus on which Kyle Borders was a passenger, and that the accident was due to carelessness on the part of Wilburn.

The suit stated that Borders had suffered serious injuries and that his mother had to pay the medical bills.

They had asked for $250,000 in damages for Borders and $50,000 in damages for Mrs. Borders.

Borders was awarded $25,000, and his mother was awarded $5,000.

Although the final judgment was greatly reduced from the amount sought, officials at the circuit clerk's office said the judgment was still one of the largest awarded in the county in recent years.

What's the law?

Case of the free kick

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Barry was a city slicker who got a kick out of walking in the country. Getting a kick out of a horse, however, completely surprised him. As he was walking past Farmer Brown's pasture, a horse suddenly strolled up and booted him.

Limping to the nearest courthouse, Barry sued Farmer Brown for his injuries.

"I was really tagged by that nag," he complained to a judge. "He was a real mean critter. You could see it in his sneering expression after he clobbered me."

"Nonsense!" was Farmer Brown's answer. "That was my horse, George. He's as gentle as a lamb. When he lifted his leg, it was probably only to shoo away a fly. Under the circumstances, I can't be held liable for what happened."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold Farmer Brown responsible for his horse's having booted Barry?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that while the dog's common law or primitive privilege to a first free bite has been, for the most part, taken away from him in this state, there has been no modification as to the right of a horse to his first free kick. Besides, noted the judge, there was no evidence shown that George had a vicious or mischievous disposition so as to make Farmer Brown otherwise responsible. George's good character stood unimpeached.

THE RYATTS by Jack Elrod

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Aug. 10th, the 223rd day of 1976. There are 143 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, the Japanese offered to surrender in World War II if the Emperor would be permitted to keep his throne.

On this date:

In 1821, Missouri became the 24th state.

In 1845, the U.S. Naval Academy was established at Annapolis, Md.

In 1846, Congress created the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

In 1914, France declared war on Austria-Hungary at the start of World War I.

In 1921, Franklin Roosevelt was stricken with polio at his summer home at Campobello Island in Canada.

In 1967, the people of Gibraltar voted to retain their link with Britain rather than return to Spanish sovereignty.

Ten years ago: U.S. Marines and South Koreans smashed Communist forces in separate battles in South Vietnam, killing 310 of the enemy.

Five years ago: Two buildings were destroyed by fire and two prisoners were critically stabbed during four hours of rioting at an Idaho penitentiary.

One year ago, Dmitri Shostakovich, the most famous of contemporary Soviet composers, died after a serious illness, at the age of 68.

Today's birthdays: Former movie star Norma Shearer is 72 years old. Singer Eddie Fisher is 48.

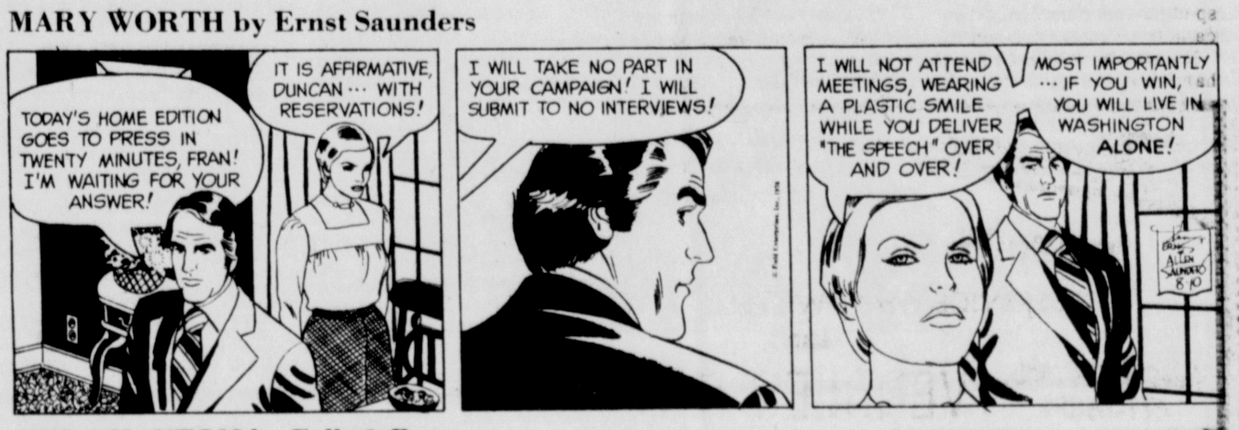

Thought for today: We have but one police force, the American woman — the late President Herbert Hoover.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago, Savannah, Ga., held a day long celebration in honor of the Declaration of Independence.

Hat Designer Says Young Starting To Dress Up More

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Olive, a big man who has made it big in the world of millinery design, started out small — in a 65- by 84-inch "salon."

"I had my own shop in an old popcorn stand I rented in Greenwich Village. There was room for only one customer at a time," recalls the 190-pound, 6-foot-1 Olive.

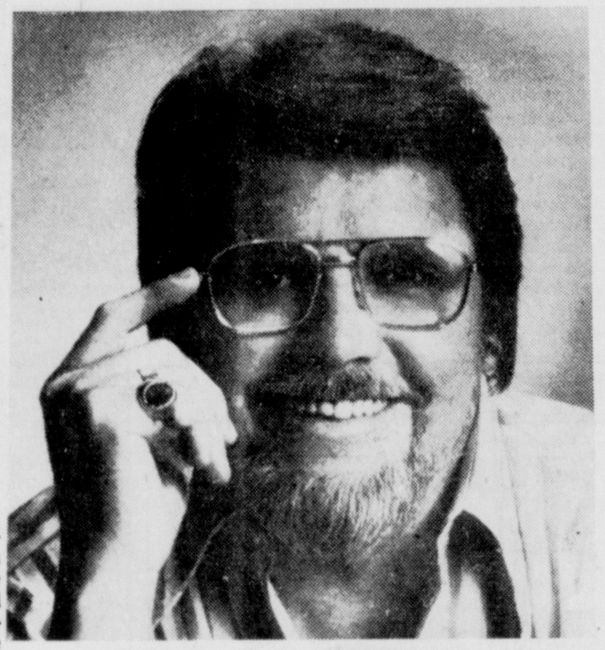

He sold hats and accessories — scarves, blouses and jewelry — which he made in the little room he lived in, where there was barely room for his sewing machine.

Olive started out as a costume designer, after studying at the Art Institute in Chicago. Working for "anything that came along" from opera to Las Vegas night club reviews, he sketched, designed, fitted, remade and improvised.

"Then I came to New York thinking they were waiting for me," says the personable designer, who wears steelrimmed glasses, a mustache and goatee. "But they didn't even know I was here and in order to survive I started making sketches for Seventh Avenue (New York City's garment district)."

Famed couturier Norman Norell asked whose hats were on the sketches and when he learned Olive had originated the designs to "balance the figures" suggested he go into the hat design field.

"In school we had had to learn to make everything, including hats and shoes, but I had never really made hats before," says Olive, who took an apprenticeship with hat designer Chanda. "I got a workaday knowledge of hat production there, but it took another 15 years to learn, working in the custom department of stores and for top hat designers."

FRANK OLIVE

Olive remembers the first hat he ever made — a saucy little Easter sailor, navy, trimmed with navy veiling with white polka dots, a white dove and navy blue bird perched on the crown.

"I was on a bus and saw a lady walking on Fifth Avenue, wearing my hat with the veil on backward and I could hardly wait to get off and tell her so," he says with a laugh. "I caught up with her and she only said, 'Oh, but that's how I prefer to wear it,'"

Now he designs 95 per cent for the wholesale trade, while the rest is custom work. And he travels some 20 weeks a year for in-store, television and charitable function appearances "to educate myself as to the needs of women from Oshkosh to Beverly Hills and to serve as ambassador for my product.

"The younger customer is dressing again," he reports. "Your rebellious flower child with the thrift shop granny dresses is conforming more now, though not losing her originality.

"She knows she doesn't have to wear a navy hat, shoes, gloves, all matching. She'll wear jeans with a designer belt and a great antique bracelet with utilitarian things and mix it all together. She doesn't have Sunday best."

Olive, who has recently started designing "soft and comfortable" hats to go with airline uniforms keeps in close touch with fashion trends.

"I work with the major designers, with fiber people, with shoe people. I take what I know of fashion trends, and accessorize the head for the proper balance," he explains.

Olive says hats should fit a woman's lifestyle as well as suit her costume. "Remember, a hat is an accessory; it must not dominate either you or your costume," he adds.

The 40-year-old bachelor, who has an apartment in Manhattan, enjoys cooking, growing plants and doing gros point rugs.

"I've already done 13 area rugs in my own design," he says. "Eight are in my big living room and five are in the closet."

Chicago Is Still A Toddlin' Group

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

Chicago, an eight-man group without a superstar member, is itself a star. Concerts sell out. Records go gold. Every album is gold and the ninth one, "Chicago's Greatest Hits," is estimated to have sold about three million copies.

It became the No. 1 best-selling album in December, was 2 in January, 4 in February and in March was still sliding very slowly, from 7 to 9. Two singles are gold also, "Just You 'n Me" and "Saturday in the Park."

Chicago has its original members plus one added later, Brazilian percussionist Laudir de Oliveira, its early benefactor James Guercio, who has produced all the records, and its original record company, Columbia, an unusual history for a rock group.

Chicago got together, in Chicago, to play something now called jazz rock. Then its members knew they wanted to play rock plus horn arrangements. Some had gone to DePaul University and Robert Lamm, who acts as group spokesman and plays keyboards and sings, had gone to Roosevelt, across the street. Lamm writes about 60 per cent of Chicago's tunes and is the only one who has made a solo album, "Skinny Boy," Columbia.

Guercio had left DePaul to play classical guitar, manage Chad and Jeremy and the Buckinghams and write songs for both. "We were playing clubs in the Midwest," Lamm recalls, "and Walter and Terry called Jimmie in New York and said he should hear us. He heard us in Niles, Mich., and liked it and signed us up."

Other group members are James Pankow, Daniel Seraphine, Lee Loughnane, Walt Parazaider, Terry Kath and Peter Cetera.

Lamm also recalls where Chicago was when it heard the first album by Blood, Sweat and Tears, which also had formed to bring together jazz and rock.

"We were playing Milwaukee, this pretty big show club, where we got fired. By that time we had enlarged our repertoire and were doing arrangements of Jimi Hendrix tunes with brass. At one set there were a couple of businessmen in the club and the owner came up and told us to play a couple of slow tunes. We did 'How Could I Be Such a Fool?', which is really nice, in three-quarter time, by Frank Zappa. The owner freaked. He wanted 'Moonlight in Vermont' or 'Misty.' He came up and started yelling."

With that incident recalled by the mention of the first Blood, Sweat and Tears album, Lamm says, "We were impressed by it. We were relieved that they were nothing like us, so no problem. We were perhaps a little disappointed a brass band combining jazz with rock had got recorded before we had a chance to. We knew we were going to record. It turned out to be a year and a half away."

Guercio moved Chicago to Los Angeles, put them in a house and paid the rent, gave each member $35 a week spending money and took care of big bills for a year and a half. "He put up, and here we are," Lamm says. "It's a lot because of him. More than being a producer, he has been a friend. It gets to be complicated doing business with somebody who is your friend and who helped you, but the relationship has survived."

It's also difficult sometimes for musical group members to get along. Lamm attributes Chicago's success there to "everybody in the band really being like brothers and being an uncle to each other's kids. Personally and musically, we're a family."

When they got to Los Angeles, Chicago began performing. "We wound up as the house band at the Whiskey a Go Go on Monday and Tuesday nights. That was an important place for up-and-coming groups to play. The owner was from Chicago; that may have helped.

"Jimi Hendrix came to see us. Kath was his favorite guitar player. That was our first tour, opening for Jimi, for $750 a night for the group."

The first album was released in 1969, "The Chicago Transit Authority," then the group shortened its name to Chicago and albums since have been entitled "Chicago," "Chicago III," "Chicago at Carnegie Hall," then all the rest have numbers. "Chicago IV" doesn't sound as dated in later years as if some catch phrase of that time had been used, Lamm says.

Robert Lamm

BICENTENNIAL SALUTE—Amy Schwendimann, 10, of Richardson, Tex., won a prize in a nationwide contest on "The Spirit of '76" with this cigar-box house showing Betsy Ross and the Revolutionary-era flag.

Red, White and Glue Shows Kids' Spirit

NEW YORK (AP) — One nillion of the nation's junior rafstmen from 40,000 schools have illustrated their concept of "The Spirit of '76" by glueing such material as bread dough, clothespins, matches, cigar boxes, pennies, popsicle sticks and papier mache for entries in a national Bicentennial contest.

Third-grader Matthew McCommas, 8, of Cleveland, Ohio, used layers of burnt-edged wooden matches to make an American eagle with the message "Freedom's Wings 1776-1976" printed on a streamer in the bird's beak.

Matches were used in another way by Allen Smith, also 8 and in the third grade in Shrewsbury, Pa. He crafted an American flag with blue and red match tips and had 13 stars circling "1776" on natural wood match ends. Rows of red and natural match tips were lined up for stripes.

Tara Martinez, 9, fourth-grader of Gonzalez, La., made a mouth-watering white birthday cake that looked as though it were topped with flaked coconut. Circular, it was covered with torn tissue flakes with red and blue stars glued on each "slice."

Old, Old Wine

In the Tuscany hills of Italy where the Cianti wine grape is grown, paleontologists have discovered a million-year-old fossil grape vine they think may be an ancestor of the same "Vitis vinifera" cultivated there today.

Swine flu bill goes to legislators

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate are preparing to take action on a bill that would clear the way for a government-sponsored inoculation program to protect nearly every American against a deadly strain of swine flu.

Both the House and Senate planned action today on a federal liability insurance plan that would protect the manufacturers of the swine flu vaccine from legal action by those who are inoculated.

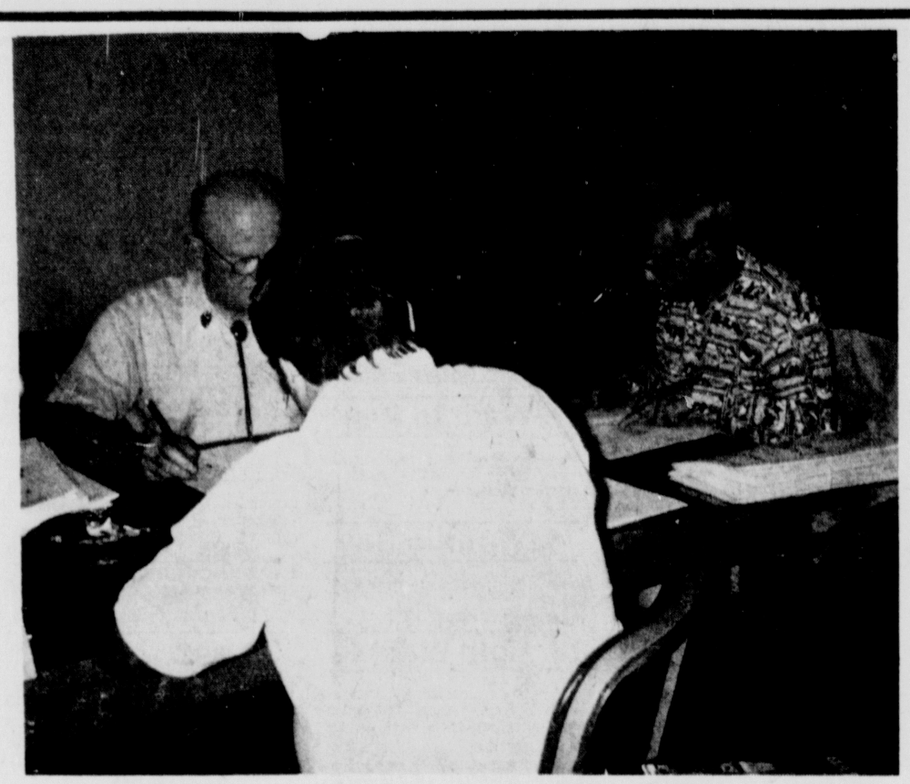

If Congress doesn't pass the bill today, it will have to wait until members return from the Republican National Convention. The Ford administration and backers of the inoculation plan say that would mean more delay before the vaccine could be distributed.

The insurance problem has stalled the vaccine program for weeks.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chairman of the House Commerce Committee's subcommittee on health, indicated there could be some problem getting the measure out of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee and onto the House floor.

"Certainly time is not on our side," said Rogers, before trying to get the measure to the awi "But I think we will be successful."

Health officials say zhat if the inoculation program beginssbw it still will be late September before the first vaccine is ready.

Canvassing the votes

Broken machine caused the delayed flash flood warning

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — A broken National Weather Service machine caused a delayed warning for residents of the Big Thompson Canyon the night a flash flood struck the area, the Rocky Mountain News reported Tuesday.

The paper quoted Robert Beck of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration as saying a broken remote radar transmitter in Limon, Colo., cost the Denver forecaster on duty some precision in pinpointing severe weather and also slowed his work.

Beck is directing the disaster investigation team probing the performance of the Denver office of the weather service in the flood, which claimed at least 89 lives and caused more than $28 million in damage.

Three more bodies were pulled from the flood debris in the canyon Monday as workers in a makeshift morgue continued efforts at identifying the dead. Sixty-three victims have been identified, although only 58 names have been released.

Two firms with government contracts moved into the canyon to begin cleanup operations. The firms, receiving a total of $134,300, were expected to take two weeks to clear out the tons of debris deposited by the 12-foot wall of water that flashed down the 30-mile canyon.

The American Red Cross still has about 80 names on missing persons lists, but officials believe most of those persons escaped the flood without notifying them.

Weather service forecaster John Schwab, said he didn't think the balky machine 90 miles from his office "was a big factor" when he worked to provide weather warnings on the night of the flood.

But Beck said his team was unanimous in deciding the broken-down machine "did degrade the capability of Mr. Schwab to get a precise warning out as quickly as he would have been able to if he had it (the machine."

Ford forces counter advance VP proposal

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford's campaign strategists, trying to counter a move to require advance announcement of his vice presidential choice, are holding out the longshot possibility that Ronald Reagan might wind up as his running mate.

That couldn't happen if the choice had to be disclosed before the presidential nomination is settled — so the Ford men say some Reagan delegates may wind up voting against the rule proposed by the challenger's campaign manager.

They're ready to fight all week — and they may have to — against the vice presidential rule proposed by John P. Sears, who wants the Republican National Convention to require that candidates name their running mate at least a half-day in advance of the roll call on the Whit emnation. White House nomination.

With that maneuver, and with pressure in the platform committee, the Reagan camp is testing Ford's clout in convention preliminaries, hoping to gain strength for the main event.

The process continued today, as a Republican rules committee considered a requirement that delegates be compelled to vote in accordance with the verdicts of binding primary elections in 20 states.

Otherwise, delegates now bound to one candidate by primary election could be freed to switch to the other, with Reagan the likely beneficiary. Ford supports the rule binding the delegate votes, Reagan opposes it.

The surprise vice presidential proposal Sears advanced on Monday would make the rule moot anyhow by declaring that no delegate could be bound to support a presidential candidate who failed to name his vice presidential choice by 9 a.m. on the day of presidential nomination, Aug. 18 in this case.

Reagan already has named his, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Ford has said he will stick to the traditional route and will disclose his choice after the presidential nomination.

"It's an attempt by Sears to write a rule that would force us to make the same mistake Reagan did," said Peter Kaye, spokesman for the Ford campaign.

Two of the six members of Ford's board of convention strategy cited the possibility of a Reagan vice presidential nomination in forecasting defeat of the Sears proposal.

Reagan has said he would not accept the vice presidential nomination, and a top aide said he means it. Ford at one point said he accepted Reagan at his word. He now has asked for financial and health information from more than a dozen Republicans he is considering as possible vice presidential choices.

Richard Hermann of Lincoln, Neb., who is handling convention rules strategy for the Ford campaign, said that doesn't mean that Reagan is out as a potential running mate. Hermann said some Reagan delegates want their man in second place if he can't win the top spot, and therefore will vote against the Sears proposal.

Dean Burch, a former White House aide and another member of the Ford strategy panel, added that despite the customary denials "it is not unusual that candidates for president wind up on the same ticket."

Tally book for challenger Tony Heckemeyer also differed from the unofficial count of 2,411. The canvass gave him 2,410 votes in one book and 2,412 in the other.

Goodin said he would certify two totals when he forwards the tally books to the secretary of state's office today.

Some Missouri delegates are still undecided

JEFFERSON GITY, Mo (AP) — There's less than a week remaining before delegates gather for the GOP National Convention, but Missouri still has four members who say publicly they don't know who they'll support for the presidential nomination.

But one of those has already made a decision and another says he hopes to make one in the next few days.

"I'm not going to divulge my decision until the convention," said Marlene Zinzel, an at-large delegate from the 3rd District of south St. Louis. "I sat down and put a few things together and decided that I'd probably go one way, and I'm not going to say which way that is."

When she was selected at the GOP State Convention in Springfield June 12, Mrs. Zinzel was listed on the slate of delegates supporting Ronald Reagan. A few days after the convention she announced that she was uncommitted.

Missouri will send 49 delegates to the convention in Kansas City next Monday. Of those, 29 are for the former California governor, 16 support President Ford and four are uncommitted.

The other three unpledged delegates are also from the 3rd District, although unlike Mrs. Zinzel, they were selected at a congressional district caucus in May.

William Skaggs said he hoped to make a decision "in the next few days."

"I really have no intentions of arriving in Kansas City uncommitted," Skaggs said. "I'd like to get this thing over with as soon as possible."

Skaggs was asked what kind of considerations he was giving before deciding whom to vote for.

"Nothing we could talk about," he replied.

William Olenyik, another uncommitted delegate, said he was still undecided despite his newspaper poll which showed a margin of 6-1 in support of Reagan. He said about 65 persons participated in the poll.

Olenyik said he was not going to make a decision "until I get up there and find out what the rest of the country is doing."

Fred Whaley was unavailable for comment. His home residence telephone number had been disconnected, and a spokesman at his contracting business office said Whaley was ill and would be out of touch "for a few days."

Repeated efforts to reach Whaley late last week were also unsuccessful.

Joe Swarts is a Reagan delegate, but is leaning to Ford. The Kansas City resident said he would not switch his preference to the President unless a majority of those who selected him would ask him to do so.

East Prairie CB'ers to host jamboree

EAST PRAIRIE — The East Prairie Screaming Eagles Citizens Band Club will host its first jamboree Saturday from 2 to 9 p.m. in the A. J. Martin Elementary School cafeteria.

The event, planned as an annual affair, will feature door prizes, cake walks, jail house, children's games, food and free coffee.

CB equipment will also be displayed and three pieces will be given away. First prize will be a 23- channel base radio, second prize is a mobile unit and third prize will be a power microphone.

Trophies will be given for the oldest licensed CB operator, best dressed child (age 2-6), largest clubs in matching uniform (in state and out of state), best dressed club (six members or more) and the club traveling the longest distance (six members or more).

Guests do not have to be a member of any club to attend, and there is no admission fee.

Producers may raise gas prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Natural gas producers are free to raise gas prices if they first agree to refund the money in case the Federal Power Commission eventually decides the price is too high.

A federal appeals court cleared the way Monday for a new price ceiling approved by the FPC July 27 to go into effect but attached a condition designed to protect consumers.

The three-judge court ruled that producers raising their prices to the new ceiling must agree to refund the excess money if the power commission decides on appeal that it set the ceiling too high. Producers who refuse to agree to the refund provision would be barred from raising prices until the commission rules on the appeal.

It was not immediately known which option the producers will select.

The increase approved July 27 would increase the average cost of natural gas by 4 to 8 per cent this coming year.

Bond is approached for VP post

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Gov. Christopher Bond has been asked by the White House staff if he is interested in the Republican vice presidential nomination, a Bond aide said Monday.

"He said he was very proud and honored to have been included but would not comment further," Bruce Blomgren, the Bond aide, said.

Bond is one of several candidates contacted by the Ford Administration, including Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

Bond was contacted by the White House while vacationing in Idaho. He arrived in Kansas City Monday.

The 37-year-old governor was mentioned as a vice presidential possibility when Ford first took office. However, Ford picked Nelson Rockefeller.

Bond's name was mentioned earlier this year as a vice presidential possibility, but Bond discounted that speculation, saying he didn't foresee himself doing anything other than running for a second term as governor.

Store clerk is killed by robbers

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A 79-year- old man working in a liquor store was shot and killed Saturday night during an attempted robbery, according to police.

Authorities said Lawrence Hitt, an employe of the Argo Package Store for 20 years, was killed about 10:55 p.m. Saturday during a scuffle with two robbers who fled without taking any money.

Police said Hitt was killed by a single bullet when he resisted a command to lie on the floor. Hit was shot by one of the men while the other was trying to open the cash register. Both men fled without opening the register.

'Redneck National Anthem' is written by a redneck

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Vernon Oxford is a redneck and proud of it.

Oxford is an easygoing, slender 35-year-old native of the Ozark Mountains who's as country as cornbread and has a top single on the charts, "Redneck! (The Redneck National Anthem)."

"A redneck is someone who enjoys country music and likes beer," he said as he relaxed on a sofa at a Music Row record company. "I don't mind being called a redneck. I'm proud of it."

Oxford, who appears occasionally on the Grand Ole Opry, has fulfilled the dream of thousands. In 1964, he left a $1.35-an-hour job as a shipping clerk in Wichita, Kan., bought a little trailer and headed for Nashville and a country music career.

Guitar in hand, he appeared at the RCA studio and told the receptionist he'd like to record.

"I guess my approach surprised them," he recalled. "The woman looked at me kind of funny, then went to another room to get Bob Ferguson (a producer). He told me to stay around, check around and come back if I didn't find anything else."

Some 18 months later, RCA signed him to a contract and he lasted two years. He then began making a living by painting and hanging sheet rock.

In 1974, he became popular in England when a two-album set was released in the overseas market. Last fall, he had his first hit in America, "The Shadows of My Mind."

He didn't quit his job painting and hanging sheet rock until early this year, and even then some parts of the job stuck with him.

He once walked into a building with a group of record producers, the pressures of recording seemingly weighing heavily on their minds. Oxford, though, was studying the ceiling. "It sure would take a long time to hang that ceiling," he remarked.

"You hear a lot of stories about me," he said sheepishly. "I am just what I am — not much, I guess."

One story concerns a problem Oxford had last year, when a single he recorded, "I Wish You Would Leave Me Alone," was rejected by some country music stations for being "too country."

"Redneck! (The Redneck National Anthem)" has been his biggest hit and he usually gets a spirited reaction from the audience when he sings it.

"I sang it in Houston the other night and I asked the rednecks to stand up and salute," he recalled. "So this guy stood up and put his hand over his heart through the whole song."

"redneck" cult developing in country music, similar to the

Some music industry executives believe there may be a "outlaw" genre.

Kelly says he will remain FBI head

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley says he does not plan to follow the practice of some heads of federal agencies and submit a routine resignation if a new president is elected in November.

On the contrary, Kelley said he plans to stay on the job as long as his health is good and he thinks he can serve.

Speaking Sunday on CBS's "Face the Nation," the chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said some subordinates "knowingly deceived" him when they told him that burglaries conducted by the agency had ended in 1966.

He has since acknowledged that such break-ins occurred as recently as 1973, the year he was appointed director.

Saying he does not condone the deception, Kelley vowed, "If I find those who have knowledgeably, knowingly deceived me, some action will be taken." But he observed that people are reluctant to confess to actions that might result in prosecution.

Since Kelley took over the agency, the FBI has been the focus of inquiries into burglaries by bureau agents and allegations of financial wrongdoing and other abuses by present and former bureau officials.

Asked about a recent burglary in Denver by an FBI informant, Kelley said such an action by an agent would be improper and therefore it was improper for an informant. Kelley said he didn't know if the agent concerned knew of the burglary plan in advance, but that the agent is no longer handling informants.

Kelley declined comment on the firing of former Assistant Director Nicholas P. Callahan, saying he is the subject of an investigation.

Kelley said that as many as three or four agents may be disciplined as a result of continuing inquiries into alleged FBI abuses.

Soap opera writers are not all tormented New Yorkers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Most soap operas are taped in New York, and their characters and plots have much grief and woe. It must mean all their writers are tormented New Yorkers, reflecting the travails of Fun City.

Guess again. Case in point: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Soderberg, head writers on CBS' "As the World Turns." They say they're quite happy.

They should be. Their show is taped in New York, but they cook up its daily diet of angst from 2,800 miles away, working at their home in the pleasant, unhurried coastal city of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Soderberg only laughed when a caller suggested it must be awful hard in all that tranquility for him and the Mrs. to compose daily difficulties acted out in the frenetic, nervous hamlet of New York.

"No, there's an advantage to it," he said. "We're more out in the world than you are if you're in the world where they make the show.

"Very often, we'll say (to the show's East Coast end), 'Please look out the window and see what the rest of the world is doing.' Sometimes there are little everyday things you don't see or do in New York."

And, he said, the community in which he and his wife live "pretty much reflects everyday stories" of the sort going round and round on "As the World Turns," a show they've been lead writers on for three years.

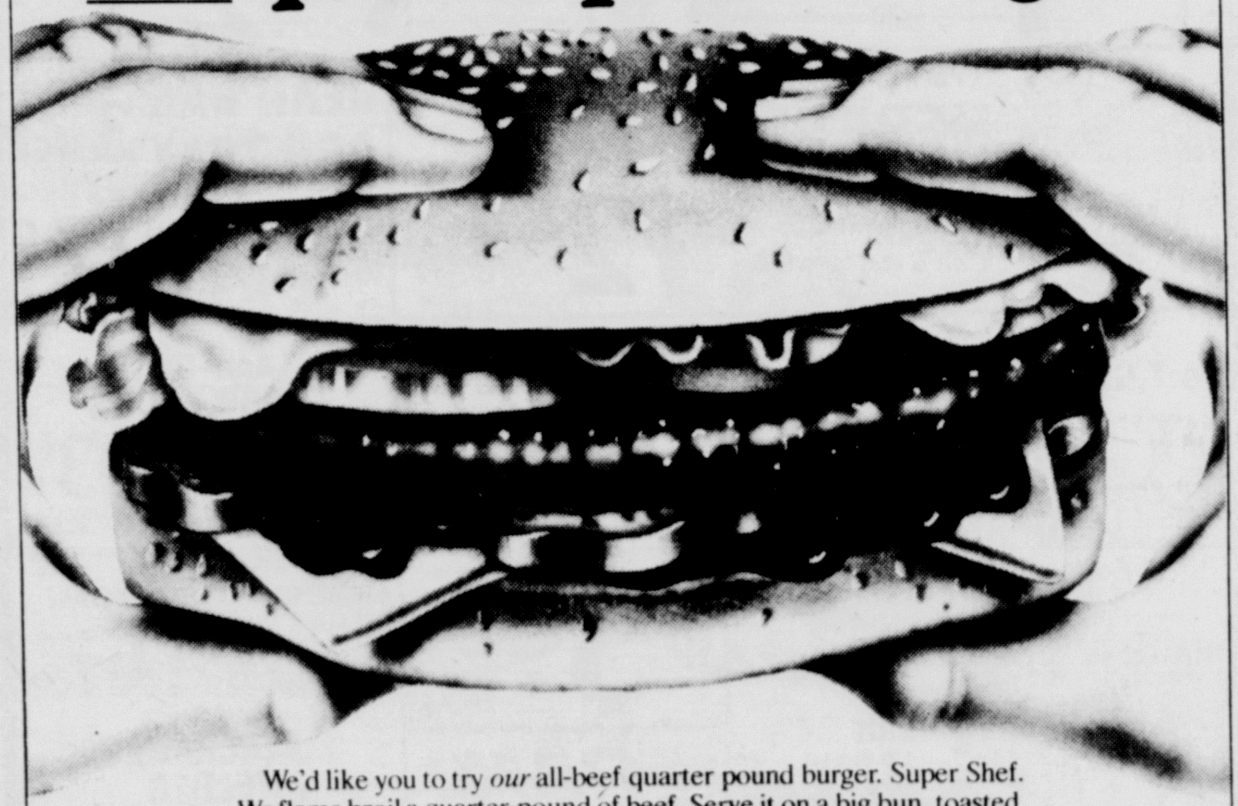

The Soderbergs have been writing for 30 years, and married for 26 years, but they only began writing soaps together eight years ago when they started as a team on "Guiding Light."

How do they put together their New York shows from California?

Soderberg says it works this way: They create what they call "the long-term story," which charts the course of the plots, subplots, stars and lesser players for as much as a year in advance.

Then they outline every act in each show, writing a detailed daily outline concerning what the day's plot and characters are up to, occasionally tossing in suggested lines of dialogue.

Researchers debate increase in gardening

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is money, taste buds, "lifestyle" or relaxation the primary push behind the growth in home gardening? Who's doing it and who isn't?

Researchers and social science analysts in the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service are working on those questions to provide answers for the food and gardening industries.

Preliminary findings indicate that in 1974, the second of two years of 14.5 per cent average jumps in retail food prices, 43 per cent of U.S. households planted a garden. That's about 30 million families of various sizes.

This year, surveys in April, May and June indicated about 48 per cent of U.S. families had gardens planted or intended to plant one.

Private surveys have indicated that about 39 per cent of American households gardened in 1971. The USDA studies cover only from 1974 on.

The initial 1,500 interviews this year are to be followed this fall with a more extensive questionnaire. The interviews were conducted with "the main food shoppers" or those who had the major responsibility for food-purchasing decisions within their households.

So the data so far comes from the shopper who is not necessarily the gardener. USDA officials cautioned against drawing too many conclusions from these tentative findings.

In an article in the current "Vegetable Situation" publication of USDA's Outlook and Situation Board, Evelyn F. Kaitz and Jon P. Weimer of the study group point to a "slight but steady growth in home gardening over the past three years."

"This suggests that the interest in home fruit and vegetable gardening generated in the United States three or four years ago ... may be becoming firmly established and is not necessarily a transitory phenomenon," they wrote.

The popularity of home gardening was found highest in the north-central states and rural areas and among larger households. Mrs. Kaitz said the data does not yet indicate how much of the sample is composed of farm families that have a vegetable garden to supplement store-bought groceries, whatever their money-producing crop.

Indeed, the survey of shoppers listed economic motives second, at 40 per cent, among the reasons families turned to or continued gardening.

A preference for fresh fruits and vegetables was the first motive, with 50 per cent of those responding mentioning that reason.

Less than half the surveyed households froze some fruits and vegetables last year, whether they were home-grown or store bought, the article said.

Only 30 per cent said someone in the household canned or preserved the crops from the home garden, and only 14 per cent of those questioned gave canning as a reason for gardening.

Per capita income figures on the households are not yet completed, Mrs. Kaitz said. The straight family-income statistics showed that 55 per cent of those having gardens all three years had incomes above $10,000, and 41 per cent of those not gardening any of those years had annual earnings below $10,000.

She suggested that some poorer families are not gardening because they could be in urban apartments without access to a community plot, while the higher-income households could easily have eight or nine members.

The tomato was the most popular vegetable grown last year, showing up in 95 per cent of the gardens. More than 60 per cent of the gardens included beans, cucumbers and peppers, and more than half produced radishes, scallions, lettuce, onions, carrots and corn.

Less than a fourth of the respondents said they had fruit trees or planted such garden crops as melons and strawberries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has rejected a proposal to speed up the time it takes for a change in the market price for raw milk in Minnesota and Wisconsin to be reflected in the prices paid to milk producers.

H.L. Forest, an official of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said the evidence presented at a hearing in Clayton, Mo., in early June showed that the "advanced pricing" clause proposed for 34 federal milk-marketing-order regions should not be adopted.

"It would adversely affect manufacturing-milk values, reduce producer returns and create disorderly marketing conditions contrary to the intent of the federal marketing-order law," a USDA spokesman said.

It now takes about two months for a jump in Minnesota-Wisconsin prices to work its way through the milk-industry pricing system to the retail buyer's wallet. Those seeking the advanced pricing wanted to keep price changes later in the system closer to the so-called M-W series.

The complicated pricing formulas, undergirded by USDA price supports, are keyed to the markets in those two major milk-producing states.

The areas that would have been affected included most Midwest states bordering on the Mississippi River.

The milk orders set the minimum that milk dealers must pay dairy farmers for the raw product, based on their use of it en route to consumers.

The handlers know in advance what they have to pay for milk used for drinking but do not know until the fifth day of the month following a price change in the M-W series what they must pay farmers for milk that will be used in butter, cheese and other products.

INFORMAL POLL

BOSTON (AP) — Among 100,000 visitors to "The Revolution" exhibit here, 47 per cent have been classified in an informal survey as patriots on the colonists' side.

They were rated by a Honeywell computer according to their votes on four major Revolutionary issues — the Stamp Act, the Boston Massacre Trials, the Boston Tea Party and the Siege of Boston.

Loyalists among the visitors totaled 27 per cent. Another 26 per cent were undecided. It is estimated that in 1776 a slight majority of the colonists were patriots, with a sizable minority remaining loyal to the Crown.

TV's 'family hour' hearings are scheduled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Next Tuesday and Wednesday, a House communications subcommittee will hold hearings here on an item that has raised a few Hollywood hackles and a lawsuit — TV's "family hour" at night.

It should be interesting. Scheduled witnesses include producer Norman Lear, a major family hour critic; National Gay Task Force folk; Gene "Star Trek" Roddenberry; comic Bill Cosby; and a local PTA group.

Also scheduled to speak, a subcommittee spokesman said, is a man from the Adult Film Association, a group whose X-rated wares aren't apt to be on TV during the family hour or any hour.

He's on the list because he wrote and asked to be heard, added the spokesman, Allan Pearce, an economist for the Federal Communications Commission before he joined the subcommittee.

All the witnesses were invited — but not subpoenaed — to appear, said Rep. Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., the subcommittee chairman. He said the hearings aren't intended to result in any proposed new laws.

It's only an "oversight" hearing into how the FCC is doing its job, said Van Deerlin, whose House group has jurisdiction over the agency.

The sessions will come during deliberations by a federal judge here in a suit filed last October by Lear, eight other situation comedy makers and three guilds representing actors, writers and directors.

The suit, against the networks, the National Association of Broadcasters and the FCC, asks that the NAB's undefined "family viewing" standard for early-evening entertainment shows be declared unlawful.

The FCC is involved because of talks its chairman, Richard E. Wiley, had with network and NAB officials about the "family hour" concept before it became part of the NAB's television code of standards.

Van Deerlin, who anticipates no court ruling during next week's hearings, said the fact that the family hour dispute is in court "doesn't obviate our responsibilities in the matter."

However, he said he won't be raising the issue of who "called the turn (on adoption of the family hour), or of who pressured whom."

Instead, he said, he'll concentrate on whether the family standard, in effect since September 1975, is an "intrusion" into the productivity and creativity of television's program-making corps in Hollywood.

There also may be discussions of violence on TV, he added.

Public hearing set on water, waste rules

JEFFERSON CITY— The Missouri Department of Natural Resources is holding a public hearing today at 2010 Missouri Blvd. on the organizational rules for the solid waste management and water supply programs in the Division of Environmental Quality.

The hearing is being held to receive public testimony on these proposed rules in order to meet the requirement on rule-making contained in Senate Bill 58. These organizational rules explain the programs' functions and operations, and how the public may obtain information.

The purpose of the solid waste management program is to insure the safe, adequate disposal of solid waste materials.

The water supply program's purpose is to insure safe drinking water for Missourians.

July unemployment rate is debated

NEW YORK (AP) — What are we to make of the utterly illogical report that the unemployment rate rose in July because the job market improved?

The question is perhaps a bit late in being posed, because it seems likely that a good many people have made up their minds, even perhaps about the Presidential election, as a result of those statistics.

About 400,000 people found jobs in July, bringing total employment to 87.9 million, the greatest figure ever recorded. But the jobless rate, a popular symbol of economic strength or weakness, rose to 7.8 per cent.

That rise, from 7.5 per cent, resulted almost entirely from te fact that a lot of potential workers previously had been erased from the records, expunged from the labor force. Statistically, they ceased to exist.

Why was this done? Because, explains the Bureau of Labor Statistics, these individuals withdrew themselves from the official labor force when, discouraged by their poor prospects, they failed to look for work just prior to its surveys.

Thus, the worst of the unemployed were statistically eliminated.

More than one million discouraged people were so classified at the time during the recent recession. They were there; they were unemployed; they weren't counted, on the jobless or the labor force rolls.

Now, with the economy recovering, these people once again see a possibility of obtaining jobs and so they are searching again, thus becoming part of the labor force. Understandably, despite better prospects they don't find work immediately, and so they also become unemployed.

The rise in the jobless rate, therefore, can be seen as arising largely from a statistical concept rather than a deterioration of the economy. But the latter will be the interpretation used by many people.

The paradox wasn't unforeseen. It was inevitable that when hopes were restored many of these people would again become active job-seekers. Some, at least, hadn't given up looking because they didn't want work; they wanted it but couldn't get it.

With 7.4 million Americans seeking and failing to find jobs, the situation is bad enough without statistical concepts entering the picture, first to make the jobless rate appear lower during the recession, and then to distort the trend in the recovery.

Professionals understand the inadequacies of any statistical measure, and they make proper allowances. Laymen often do not.

The monthly rate, which is a complex and limited — even arbitrary — measure of economic performance, incorrectly has come to be thought of as a magnificently simple indicator, even of individual job prospects.

That being so, it is also an ingredient of many decisions, including the millions of decisions soon to be made on who should be President of the United States for the next four years.

Then the absurdity is seen as a danger.

Things aren't what they seem especially in the business world

NEW YORK (AP) — Poets, parents, pedants and more have been telling us from the beginning of human time that things aren't always what they seem.

The wisdom often applies to the news of business, finance and economics, to which so often we apply the conventional explanations, realizing later that, applied too often, such explanations often become meaningless.

Little more need be said about the July jobless rate, which rose to 7.8 per cent from 7.5 per cent, leading to the conventional conclusion that here was more bad news for the economy.

Those who read a few more paragraphs realized the rise was a consequence not of a weakening economy but of one regaining strength. While unemployment rose 280,000, the number with jobs leaped 410,000.

The unemployment rate rose to 7.8 per cent because the labor force rose by 690,000, largely because individuals re-entered the job market as their prospects improved.

Another example is provided by the statistics on personal deposits in savings and loan institutions. In the first quarter of the year they totaled $18.9 billion, in the second only $11.8 billion.

Viewed casually, one would be inclined to conclude, among other things, that the ability or desire of Americans to save was less in the second quarter than in the first, and that the mortgage-lending ability of savings banks and associations was lessened.

That might be so, but before such a conclusion can be drawn we must await some indication of the size of the new checking accounts offered by these institutions. How much simply was transferred from savings to checking?

If this indeed did take place—if some of the money remained in the saving institutions but in checking rather than savings accounts—then the lending ability of the institutions wasn't reduced as much as we might think.

Another illustration: A report from the Census Bureau shows that jobs in city government rose last year at a lesser rate than before. The 2,506,000 municipal employes in October 1975 was a 0.6 per cent rise, smallest in 13 years.

Quite likely this small rise can be attributed in part to the financial conservatism that has developed among taxpayers, especially in view of the near bankrupcy of several larger, older municipalities.

New type mortgages cost more

Associated Press Writer

Traditional home mortgages with fixed monthly payments are giving way in scattered areas of the country to experimental plans designed to make it easier for would-be buyers to get loans. And the new types of mortgages usually wind up costing consumers more money.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported that at the end of the first quarter of this year there was $456 billion in outstanding mortgage debt on one-to four-family, nonfarm residential properties. About half the debt was owed to savings and loan associations.

Most of the mortgages were written in traditional form. The average annual interest rate, as of June, was just under 9 per cent.

Richard Marcis of the board's Office of Economic Research said the use of nontraditional mortgage forms, including variable rate loans where the amount of interest is allowed to fluctuate, is still "relatively limited."

At the same time, he said, the variable rate loan has been adopted by 10 state-chartered savings and loan associations in California. These institutions have loaned $2 billion on variable rate mortgages in 16 months, he said. (Note: federally chartered savings and loan assocations are prohibited from offering variable rate mortgages; the situation at state-chartered institutions differs from state to state.)

Another alternative, called the graduated payment mortgage, has been proposed by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass. Under this plan, the rate of interest would remain constant, but the size of the monthly payment would fluctuate. It would be relatively low at the beginning — making things easier for young people just starting out — and would increase over the years as inflation and experience push up earning power.

David Strachan of the American Bankers Association said the interest rate on the traditional mortgage is based the cost of money to the bank now and over the life of the loan. With a variable rate mortgage, Strachan said, "the bank can operate a lot closer to the actual cost of money." Allowing the interest rate to fluctuate also makes mortgages competitive with other types of loans which usually have higher interest rates.

To attract the deposits which are a major source of mortgage money, a thrift institution such as a savings and loan association must pay an interest rate that is competitive with other investments. Bankers contend this is more difficult when the institution is locked into a long-term loan returning a fixed amount of money.

Oliver H. Jones, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers of America, said a variable rate mortgage gives the borrower "a slightly lower initial interest rate, but one that would vary, up or down, with the future cost of money to the lender."
